First-in tallship spruces up after Pacific 'rampage'

Two giant Japanese sail training ships became first of a number of tallships to visit Victoria when they pulled into Royal Roads Wednesday morning after a 38-day voyage from Tokyo. Captains Nakazawa Hiroshi of Nippon Maru and Ichihara Yoshizo, of Kaiwo Maru, said in joint statement on arrival that sister ships suffered "sea rampage" for most of voyage to Victoria. Here, Nippon crew members, spruce up vessel before it pulls into Ogden Point dock for public viewing Saturday and Sunday. (See Page 2)

Won't make farmers scapegoats—Chretien

Food soars but Liberals standing pat

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the government sympathizes with consumers for having to cope with the largest food price increases in six years but there are no policy changes aimed at meeting the problem.

Trudeau and Finance Minister Jean Chretien, facing a barrage of opposition complaints in the Commons, said farmers will not be made the scapegoat for inflation.

The opposition attack came after Statistics Canada released figures showing that food prices rose by 3.3 per cent in May, the highest increases since July, 1972, while the cost of living overall jumped by 1.4 per cent, the largest rise since July, 1975. The 12-month inflation rate last month was nine per cent.

Higher prices for beef, up 10.5 per cent in a month, and for fresh vegetables, up 22.2 per cent, led the way.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, pressing for policy changes to deal with inflation, noted that the nine-per-cent rate was more than double original anti-inflation targets of four per cent for 1978, and above the revised estimate in the April 10 budget of seven per cent.

It was clear government policy was failing, Clark added.

Chretien said he is "disappointed" with the results. He attributed the increase in the price of beef to normal sup-

'Heartless solution' for buyers

REGINA (CP) — Suggesting that consumers suffer higher beef prices while producers recoup their losses of recent years is "a heartless solution to the problem," the Consumers Association of Canada said Wednesday.

Barbra Sulzenko, director of public issues, said association committees met to discuss the issue after it was raised at the annual meeting Tuesday.

Guest speaker Dr. C. M. Williams of the University of Saskatchewan urged the association not to take a stand against higher beef prices.

Sulzenko said the association considers it "unacceptable that consumers should have to pay for producer losses."

Instead, there should be direct assistance from government and government policies to alleviate the problem, she said. The group also suggested a government-producer fund to stabilize incomes for beef producers.

She said the group also is concerned that high-protein vegetables which might be used as beef substitutes are too expensive for low-income consumers.

"We do not have any concrete solutions to the problem, but action must be taken to improve the current supply and demand imbalance, especially since it has become clear that processors and retailers have been cashing in on the producer increases by raising their own margins," Sulzenko said.

"Since import controls were put in place to help producers when prices were low, perhaps export controls should be considered as a short-term measure to help consumers."

'ZOMBIES' ADMITTED BY LEGION

EDMONTON (CP) — Delegates to the Royal Canadian Legion's national convention voted by a narrow margin Wednesday to allow certain conscripted war veterans into the organization.

Voting on a what has been a contentious issue for years, the Legion decided to allow membership to men known disparagingly as zombies—conscripted veterans who served only in Canada.

Conscripts who had served overseas already were eligible.

One official guessed the resolution might affect about 100,000 veterans, but Colin Graham of Montreal, a Legion administrator, said it is unlikely many of the conscripts will seek membership.

About 3,500 delegates are attending the convention which ends today.

Millions pledged to Zaire

BRUSSELS (AP) — Delegates of Western nations pledged $116 million in emergency aid Wednesday for economically crippled Zaire. Diplomats said the supplies could begin flowing almost immediately after the pledges are approved by the participating governments.

In Paris, France announced the withdrawal of the last of its troops sent into Zaire last month to help defeat an invasion by rebel tribesmen in Shaba province and aid in the evacuation of foreigners.

The promises of food and medical assistance were made by technical representatives of most of the 10 countries and the European common market that met Tuesday and Wednesday. They reached agreement in principle on a $1 billion plan to restore the economy and finances of Zaire.

Burnaby sniper hits two women

BURNABY (CP) — Police were searching for two armed teen-aged boys Wednesday night after a sniping incident in which two women were wounded within an hour at the same intersection.

Police said Gwymeth Mary Clandinin, 65, was shot in the upper back while crossing the street to a bus stop at Boundary Road and Hastings.

A short time later, Holly Ann Edwards, 18, was shot in the head while walking though the area. She was in serious but stable condition in hospital, while the older woman was treated and released.

Four bullets were also fired into the rear of a parked car in the area.

40-rider forest bill nettles NDP

Forests Minister Tom Waterland introduced 40 amendments to his new Forests Act Wednesday as the Legislature began second-reading debate.

The move brought instant criticism from Opposition forests critic William King (NDP—Revelstoke-Slocan), who said it was typical of government arrogance to make so many changes and then expect intelligent debate.

"These are amendments which, for all we know, may be good," King said outside the house.

"But for heaven's sake, we should be allowed a couple of days to take a look at them before we are forced into debate. How can we possibly understand the significance of the amendments until we have had a chance to look at them."

Waterland's claim that the amendments were basically of a "housekeeping nature" did not satisfy King.

King said the only praise given the new proposals had come from the Council of Forest Industries "and I would suggest there was a good reason for that." CFI is an organization representing major forest companies.

Waterland ignored the criticism.

"Some self-interest groups have clamored for wholesale redistribution of tenure rights," he said. "Neither the government, nor the (Pearse Commission) recommended this, nor is there any valid reason to do so.

"The objective is to achieve good management through tenure security, not to impede good management through chaotic disruption of employment, communities.

England discovered!

DOVER, England (Reuter) - A crew of Hawaiians paddled their traditional outrigger canoe across the English Channel from France Wednesday to mark the 200th anniversary of the discovery of the Hawaiian islands by British explorer Captain James Cook.

The 40-foot outrigger was to be taken to Cook's birthplace, Middlesbrough, and placed in the new Cook museum.

Follow the rest of us, PM urges Levesque

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has asked Quebec Premier Rene Levesque to join other premiers and "the vast majority of Canadians" in support of the federal government's latest proposals for constitutional reform.

In a letter released Wednesday—parallel letters were sent to the other nine premiers—Trudeau urged the independence-minded Quebec premier to "make an honest assessment" of proposals released Monday that would give the country a new constitution by the end of 1981.

Levesque has already dismissed the suggestions as "profoundly insignificant."

The Trudeau letters ask the premiers to agree to meet within two weeks with federal ministers being dispatched from Ottawa to discuss the proposed changes. Marc Lalonde, minister of federal-provincial relations, has been assigned to meet Levesque.

Trudeau says he is not asking the Quebec government to "participate in a renewal of some sort of status quo."

Instead, the prime minister says he wants the Parti Quebecois government to "join in the revitalization, renewal and revival of the Canadian adventure."

Downed pilot kills self

DAWSON CITY, Yukon (CP) — RCMP say a helicopter pilot who shot himself in the head after his machine ran out of fuel while he was lost in the wilderness probably committed suicide because he felt disgraced.

A police spokesman said Tuesday that Donald Garland, 30, killed himself after his craft crashed Saturday about 32 kilometres southwest of here while on a mineral exploration trip.

Garland and one of his passengers, Robert Gerlock, were uninjured in the crash. A second passenger, Paul Brizins, suffered a minor back injury.

The police spokesman said Garland "apparently felt he could not get another flying job in the north after getting lost and allowing his copter to run out of gas."

Testers tag 2 compacts 'frightening'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group has labelled as unsafe the Dodge Omni and the Plymouth Horizon, two similar Chrysler Corp. models that won Motor Trend magazine's Car of the Year designation.

Consumers Union, a nonprofit testing organization, said it is publishing an article in its July issue of Consumer Reports, titled "Most Unfortunate Car of the Year," giving the sub-compact, front-wheel-drive Omni and Horizon its first unacceptable ratings in a decade.

At news conferences in Washington and New York, Consumers Union officials said the cars were found unacceptable because of handling problems.

Don Gshwind, director of chassis engineering for Chrysler, met reporters on the sidewalk coming out of the Washington news conference and said the test used by Consumers Union "has no relationship to the way consumers drive a car."

He acknowledged that Chrysler put the cars through the same test, but it was only one of many. "By itself, it has no meaning."

At the news conferences, Consumers Union showed films of a test in which the car was driven at expressway speed and then deflected suddenly from a straight path.

"The deflection is accomplished by twitching the steering wheel and letting go. From that point, without aid of the driver, most cars straighten themselves with a minimum of wavering from side to side and return close to their previous course," said Mark Silbergeld, director of the organization's Washington office.

Silbergeld said the performance of the Omni and Horizon in the tests "was often frightening." After test drivers released the wheel on each of three samples, "the car veered from side to side. Sometimes each swing was wider and more violent than the one before."

He said the average consumer does not have the driving skill to control the car in such circumstances.

GM RECALLING 600,000 CARS, TRUCKS

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. said Wednesday it is recalling nearly 600,000 cars and trucks — about 23,000 of them in Canada — some with fan blades that could crack and fly off and others with defective rear axles that could result in the loss of a wheel.

A GM spokesman said at least 15 persons have been injured in accidents resulting from the rear-axle flaw.

The fan blade recall involves 333,000 1978 Buick, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars and El Camino and GMC Cabellero trucks equipped with 196-cubic-inch and 231-cubic-inch Buick V-6 engines, 350-cubic-inch Buick V-8 engines and 301-cubic-inch Pontiac V-8 engines.

Full-sail sendoff still up in air

Whether Victorians will be able to see the two tallships now visiting the capital leave Ogden Point Tuesday under full sail depends on a meeting today between the ships' Japanese captains and officials of the Captain Cook Bicentennial Committee.

The Nippon Maru and her sister ship Kaiwo Maru dropped anchor Wednesday off Royal Roads Military College at Colwood.

Chances of seeing the two giant square-rigged sailing vessels from Japan leave Victoria for Vancouver under full sail appeared to dissipate at a press conference aboard the Nippon Maru with the announcement that it was only planned to sail into English Bay under full sail.

The harbor in Victoria is too narrow, the captains explained, adding that it takes two hours to completely set sail.

Later it was announced that the decision was to be reviewed because of the tremendous public interest the visit of the two ships to these waters has generated.

However, if weather allows, cadets of both ships will carry out a sail drill between 10 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. on Sunday at Pier B at Ogden Point docks.

They will handle each ship's 35 sails that cover an area of 25,000 square feet.

The 318-foot ships with their 160-foot mainmasts will move to Ogden Point docks Friday and will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Senior citizens and handicapped persons will be able to tour the ships between 10 and 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

The ships will leave for Vancouver 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Friday morning the captains and ships officers meet with Mayor Michael Young at city hall and attend receptions at Naden and city hall later in the day.

A full round of sightseeing trips and visits to various functions in the Capital Region has been laid on for the crews of the two merchant marine training vessels.

Meanwhile, reports that the race of the tallships from Hawaii to Victoria has been cancelled, have been termed "misleading."

Barclay Warburton, race organizer, said the race is definitely on. Participating ships would leave Honolulu June 24 with a scheduled arrival in Victoria July 20, he said.

There is only one such race, he noted, and has always been only one such race.

ply-and-demand cycles and other rises to higher costs of imported foods.

He hoped the situation would be temporary and added that the government had no intention of changing policy. He ruled out both imposition of controls on food prices and a new budget.

Beef prices were up now because of a dwindling supply arising from low payments in recent years to farmers, Chretien continued.

"We don't at this time have the intention of fighting that price increase on the backs of the farmers."

The economy was basically healthy, Chretien argued, in spite of the worrisome increase in prices.

Later, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand, told Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville), that a preliminary report into beef wholesaling, retailing and packing had indicated there was no profiteering in beef production. The government would act if there was any evidence of profit-taking, he added.

Trudeau said farmers were now getting "more reasonable" prices for their cattle after two years of low returns.

"We are sympathetic to the consumer but we cannot blame beef producers nor attempt to take it out on them," Trudeau added.

Earlier Wednesday, Sinclair Stevens, Conservative finance critic, said the cost-of-living increase in May was stark testimony to the failure of the anti-inflation program.

The government should bring its spending under control, reduce the expected $11.5 billion deficit expected this year and try to inspire confidence in the economy to help cut inflation and produce jobs, he said.

Stevens also said it would be difficult for the government to hold workers to six-per-cent pay raises this year when inflation is increasing at a faster rate.

Statistics Canada said beef prices were 52.5 per cent higher in May than a year earlier, while fresh vegetables—mostly imported at this time of year—were up 39.3 per cent in a year.

Higher prices for powdered skim milk, butter, fresh fruit and chicken also contributed to the food price increase.

Other factors in the cost-of-living increase were higher housing, alcohol and tobacco prices.

Excluding food prices, the cost of living rose 6.2 per cent.

or investment security, or by any further delay in concluding a process which has been under way for six years."

The minister also criticized people asking for more time to study the legislation.

"Let me remind this Legislature that we are in the sixth year of this process, and that major aspects of this process began under the former NDP administration. There has been enough time for all interests to make their views known.

"The process has been exhaustive, objective, and thorough. All interests will never be satisfied, but I believe the best balance has been struck."

King rejected the argument.

He said that while discussions may have been going on for some years, the bill proper was the first full policy statement seen.

"It would not hurt to leave the legislation on the books for several months for consideration," he said.

Saudi flogging of Britons raises cain

LONDON (AP) — Saudi Arabia's public flogging of two Englishmen convicted of peddling home brew to the Arabs in violation of Moslem law stirred a bitter outcry in Parliament on Wednesday.

A foreign office spokesman, calling it a "most sensitive issue," declined to elaborate on the public flogging of construction engineers Nigel Maidment, 27, and Brian Cooper, 35, in the town square of Ha'il in northern Saudi Arabia on May 15.

But officials said the foreign office was quietly taking action to prevent the Saudis from carrying out flogging sentences against seven other Britons convicted of similar offences.

Saudi Arabia's religious laws, drawn from the tenets of the Koran, strictly forbid the making, consumption or sale of alcohol.

Saudi officials usually turn a blind eye toward foreigners who brew their own alcohol for private consumption. Visitors to the desert kingdom say the distilling of exotic variations of bathtub booze is a popular indoor sport among the growing number of Westerners based in Saudi Arabia. About 30,000 Americans reside there.

Maidment and Cooper ran afoul of the law for peddling their mixture. A foreign office spokesman said they were arrested in December for selling alcohol to Arabs from Yemeni in Ha'il, a caravan crossroads town 400 kilometres north of Medina. They work for Prismo Universal, a British firm enlarging the airport at Ha'il.

The spokesman said that after conviction, the men chose flogging and a six-month jail term over a longer prison sentence. Newspapers reports said each got 70 strokes.

They "took their punishment philosphically," served six months in jail and have since been released, the spokesman said. They are due back in Britain Thursday.

Western winners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five tickets worth $100,000 each in the Western Express lottery were drawn Wednesday night.

The top tickets are 54971 in series 18; 48215 in series 30; 69498 in series 09; 31977 in series 13; and 93877 in series 15.

Tickets with the same numbers in any other series are worth $1,000. There are 145 such $1,000 tickets.

Cash prizes of $100 and $25 go to holders of tickets with the last four or last three digits of the winning numbers.

The draw offered a total of 13,500 cash prizes totalling just over $1 million.

Now here—an affordable way to move up to radials.

ATLAS MK. IV THE AFFORDABLE RADIAL

Many people would like to move up from conventional belted tires to the smoother ride and improved handling given by radial tires, but, our steel-belted Mark V was too much tire for the kind of driving they did.

So, we found a solution to the problem.

MK. IV: THE AFFORDABLE RADIAL

It's the Mark IV — a new radial in the Atlas line. Mark IV is built with 2 tough Polyester body plies and 2 glass belts. The Atlas Mark IV radial gives you better cornering, ride and safety than conventional belted tires — at a price that makes it easier for you to move up to radials. That's why we call it the affordable radial.

SUGGESTED RETAIL PRICES* (two or more)

TIRE TYPE	FROM (each)	TO (each)
RADIAL MK. IV	42.25	55.15
RADIAL (Steel) MK. V	49.34	73.47
BELTED MK. II	33.95	50.69
BIAS MK. I	29.17	41.13

MK. V: "STEEL BELTED" RADIAL

It's the king of the Atlas line. If you're into heavy mileage, highway driving, trailer hauling, country road driving, the Mark V steel-belted radial is for you. It has all the great radial features. And the extra margin of excellence you expect from premium quality radials.

CHOOSE AN ATLAS RADIAL FOR THE KIND OF DRIVING YOU DO

Mark IV or Mark V — the name Atlas on a tire is your guarantee of quality. What kind of tires should your car have? For the answer, it pays to see your Esso dealer, compare prices and talk radial tires. He's got the choice you need to fit your kind of driving.

*Dealers may choose to sell at prices lower than Imperial's suggested retail prices.

Two green iguana lizards, their front feet tied over their backs with cord, writhe in Nicaraguan market where they are sold for food. Harrods staff revolts

LONDON (AP) — About 700 staff at Harrods, the swank London department store where Queen Elizabeth has some of her shopping done, temporarily walked out Wednesday to protest alleged low pay.

Pickets carried banners urging customers, many of them foreign tourists, to do their shopping elsewhere. Few appeared to take much notice.

The banners read "High class store, poverty wages" and "Enter a different world of poverty." The store advertises itself as "a different world."

The union representing the protesting staff claims more than 1,000 members in a total Harrods work force of 4,000.

Israel scolded by Waldheim

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, in a heated exchange with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, accused Israel Wednesday of complicating the peacekeeping task in southern Lebanon by turning over occupied land to Lebanese Christian, rather than to UN forces.

But Waldheim conceded "it is true" that there are Palestine Liberation Organization liaison officers with the 6,100-man UN peacekeeping force in the region and that UN troops were permitting the delivery of "certain non-military supplies"—food, water and medicine—to Palestinian groups.

Still, the secretary general said, he was "surprised at the allegations" in a letter he received Tuesday from Dayan. "I must take exception to the implications and the context of your statement," he said.

Dayan's letter also said Palestinian guerrillas were "clandestinely introducing arms and other military equipment into the area" and that UN units "treat these PLO elements with indulgence and even co-operate with them."

London takes lead in crime

LONDON (UPI) — London's police chief said Wednesday crime in Britain's capital soared in 1977 to an all-time high of more than 500,000 cases — surpassing for the first time crime-ridden New York City.

"The realities of policing London are grim," Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir David McNee said in his annual report to parliament. "Reported crime rose to an all-time high of over a half a million cases."

McNee, a Scotsman from Glasgow, took over as London's top policeman a little over a year ago. This was his first annual report.

He said the total number of indictable crimes, such as robbery, assault and violence against another person, reached 568,952 — a 12 per cent increase over the previous year.

By comparison, New York City reported 517,554 felonies and 316,770 misdemeanors in 1977.

McNee said the biggest increase was in robbery and other violent theft, which totalled 12,415 cases — a 23 per cent increase. He said there were 41 bank robberies compared with 28 in 1976 "and, disturbingly, firearms were used or carried in 84 per cent of the robberies of banks, security guards and betting shops."

Labor passes survival test

LONDON (Reuter) - Britain's minority Labor government narrowly survived Wednesday a vote of confidence on the economy that could have precipitated a general election.

An Opposition motion attacking Prime Minister James Callaghan's fiscal policy was defeated by only five votes—287 to 282.

The government's five-year mandate does not expire until October, 1979, but Wednesday's narrow victory increased the likelihood of a general election this year, possibly in October.

The routine censure motion became a life-and-death struggle for the Labor party after the cabinet decided the House of Commons' debate should become a vote of confidence issue.

The cabinet's action was taken in an attempt to pressure 13 Liberal Party members into voting for the government under the terms of an interparty pact.

The decision put the government at the mercy of the Liberals and three other small groups who control the balance of power in Parliament. But the gamble paid off when most of them abstained rather than bring down the government.

To underline the fragility of the government's position, the Liberals, Scottish and Welsh nationalists and Ulster Unionists waited until the last moment before declaring their voting intentions.

Carter wants Castro pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter called on Cuban President Fidel Castro and the Angolan government Wednesday to pledge to halt further assaults on Zaire from Angola.

Carter said he had no doubt that he was right in charging that Castro knew about the recent Katangan invasion of Zaire's mineral-rich Shaba province in advance and failed to do enough to prevent it.

He also urged Congress to hold the line on spending and threatened to veto a public works appropriations bill if Congress refuses to delete money for water projects he wants killed.

And Carter said the anti-tax vote on Proposition 13 in California last week "has been observed by all of us throughout the country," and said the results were "not incompatible" with his own efforts to hold down federal spending and reduce taxes.

Carter ruled out special federal assistance to California to make up for revenue lost as a result of the Proposition 13 vote.

In an opening statement, Carter called once again on Congress to lift its embargo on arms shipments to Turkey.

Give them more what-for

DISCIPLINE SEEMS to be a problem in this soft society of ours. Few people, including educators, know how to achieve it. Now, there is a suggestion that the minister of education would consider reviving the strap in order to achieve discipline in the schools. Pat McGeer, in a letter to the Greater Victoria School Board, said he would be pleased to put the matter before his colleagues in government if the board wished to request special permission for use of the strap in local schools. The board, quite sensibly, turned down the minister's offer.

Discipline, contrary to what advocates of the strap think, is not something to be enforced by violence. As Oxford defines it, discipline is an instructive process having to do with mental and moral training. That's a far cry from raising a red welt on a child's hand by whacking him with a strip of leather. Indeed, one might say, the action shows a lack of self-discipline on the part of the adult inflicting the corporal punishment. And it is self-discipline, after all, that is the goal of the kind of training we are talking about.

At a recent public forum in Vancouver on discipline in the schools, a school superintendent and a number of principals agreed that students can obey without the strap. Suspensions have been used as a viable alternative but educators say they are finding in-school suspensions more effective. The errant student is removed from regular classes and put to work in a room by himself. He does not have the same lunch hour or school-leaving time as other students and thus is removed from the social context of school. He must complete assignments and report regularly to the principal. He has to accept responsibility and resolve the problem within himself or be suspended.

This business of responsibility is a very real part of the mental and moral training which is called discipline. So too are co-operation, involvement and effort. The trouble with classrooms today is not that there is a lack of enforced behavior but rather that students are given too much freedom of choice in determining the extent of their responsibilities as students. Their accomplishments can still be rated on an individual basis but there should be little doubt in their minds that they are expected to contribute mentally and physically to the academic and community life of the school as well as assume some responsibility for their own education.

Today's students have it too soft, not because it is illegal to strap them, but because far too little is being demanded of them.

The marry month of June

THE "RADIANT JUNE BRIDE", leaving the church with the man of her choice, probably is unaware of the part ancient Roman superstition played in her wedding date.

June is the most popular month for marrying, in part because the Romans considered it the most propitious season — especially around the time of the June full moon. The Christian church also helped in selection of June for marriage by frowning on weddings during Lent or other periods of fasting or penitence.

Today's June bride can consider herself lucky that she is being married in the 20th century instead of several hundred years earlier. In bygone days, particularly among the Anglo-Saxons, the bridegroom was given a shoe by the bride's father to denote a transfer in authority over the lady. By custom, the new husband tapped or struck his wife on the head (using the shoe, presumably) to demonstrate his mastery.

The bride, tossing her bouquet to waiting bridesmaids, doesn't know how lucky she is. The bouquet-throwing replaces an old custom of garter-snatching. Competition for this good luck token was fierce and brides wishing to avoid a possible mauling left a garter hanging loosely and easily reachable.

Men attendants in today's weddings also are better off than those of past ages. In the days when wives were captured in forays between tribes, the groomsmen had the job of warding off hostile relatives of the "prize".

Today's newlyweds leave after the ceremony on a honeymoon. In the times of male dominance it was sometimes necessary for the couple to hide out, until the bride's family stopped looking for her.

A turnabout seen:

U.S. economists hail Proposition 13

By DONALD C. BAUDER

SAN DIEGO — At last, the U.S. economy can enjoy a ray of sunshine.

Overwhelming passage of the Jarvis-Gann initiative in California — plus the momentum rolling in many other states — makes it possible for the most crotchety bear to become bullish, at least for the long term.

In recent years, the intellectual case has been building inexorably. Conservatives, monetarists — and increasingly, moderates and even some liberals — have come to realize that the only major long-term negative hanging over the U.S. economy has been excessive government.

As long as the government's percentage of gross national product (GNP) was 35 per cent and growing, it was inevitable that the economy eventually would stagnate and crumble, as it has in Great Britain (where government is 60 per cent of GNP).

As long as the government was deliberately creating inflation by printing money to pay its bills, the U.S. economy was locked into the inflation-recession cycle — and the only time it was possible for a realist to be bullish on either the economy or the market was at a time when either or both were inordinately depressed and a temporary rebound lay ahead.

But now, the long-term bullish posture is plausible.

To be sure, there are potential pitfalls: It is too late to prevent stagflation or recession in late 1978 or 1979 — and perhaps the downturn following that, too. The voters' tax rebellion momentum could stop. And politicians and bureaucrats have numerous tricks up their sleeves to keep their swindle (of which they are society's only beneficiaries) going.

Nonetheless, the people have blown the whistle on government — removing the only obstacle to the economy's continuing future growth.

As financial analysts said in interviews, the movement is sweeping the country — and should, on balance, be extremely bullish for the economy and the markets.

But as some warned, the rebellion will be a painful one: The economy and the markets may well suffer withdrawal symptoms.

However, to prevent the nation from destroying itself through excessive taxes and government spending — as its largest city, New York, has already done — the first step had to be made. And this appears to be it.

Said Lawrence A. Kudlow, money market economist for Wall Street's Paine Webber Jackson and Curtis and a former economist with the Federal Reserve, "It looks like what has happened in California will spread throughout the U.S. during an election year that might conceivably mark a turning point in post-Second World War economic history. It is great. The mood here has improved tremendously."

He said, "Taxpayers are furious that coffers are overflowing, but instead of returning the money to those who earned it, government bureaucrats are spending it in arrogant, frivolous and unproductive ways. The money belongs to the public, not the politicians — this is what voters are saying."

He believes that Wall Street's expectation of a landslide on Jarvis-Gann has definitely been a factor in the market rally of recent weeks — and it could continue. "Maybe the stock market is looking beyond eight per cent inflation and eight per cent interest rates and is looking into the 1980s, to an economy which would emphasize capital formation — in which inflationary pressures would be reduced, and the role of the government would be diminished," exulted Kudlow.

Robert Stovall of Dean Witter Reynolds said, "California's tentacles have extended into the bowels of the East, and that's good. The Middle America appleknocker is beginning to express his fully justified wrath. It looks to me like this will sweep the country — coast to coast. It will impact Congress, the White House — certainly it should be good for Congress' and the administration's consideration of the capital gains tax and the energy package.

"This will reverberate from now until November. It has been one factor in the current market rise and should continue to be a positive factor."

Richard Russell, author of Dow Theory Letters, was jubilant — but he warned it could hurt the market. "It's great for the country. If the country was to survive, a taxpayers' revolt had to start.

"But it will be deflationary, and could be bearish. It's like taking a person on dope off his heroin; there will be contractions, severe disruptions. The nation has lived on spending and debt for so long, if it becomes a national trend, the whole economy could cave in. But if the game isn't stopped some time, we'll all go broke. If we'd done it 20 years ago, when we had less debt in the system, it wouldn't have been so disruptive."

The California tax revolt a defeat for education

TORONTO — The endorsement by the voters of California of the Jarvis-Gann Amendment cutting property taxes is a repudiation of the principle that lavish education spending is the cure for all social and economic ills.

The Jarivs-Gann Amendment reduces property taxes in California to one per cent of 1975-76 assessment and the effect of its implementation will be to cut municipal revenues from property taxes from $12 billion to $5 billion.

When California voters were offered the choice between the continuation of current levels of education spending and reduced tax rates on their houses, they plumped for lower taxes, although much of California's leadership, including bankers and businessmen, opposed the Jarvis-Gann proposition.

The mania for public education began in California. It was to be the utopia whose citizens were to be pushed into upward mobility through a huge, publicly-financed education structure. A whole society would educate itself into affluence.

In 1960, the state adopted a "Master Plan for Education" under which the government undertook the building of a highly ramified, comprehensive network of educational institutions. At the summit of this network was the University of California, which by 1966 had 85,000 students on nine campuses and drew its student body from the upper 12.5 per cent of high school graduates. At the next level were the 18 state colleges which by 1966 had 170,000 students and drew their students from the upper 33 per cent of high school graduates. The bottom level consisted of 73 junior colleges which in 1966 had 487,000 students. The California institutions of post-secondary education by 1966 had an enrolment of 750,000.

According to the California philosophy, a region could not spend too much on education, and it stood as a beacon to educators with an expansionary cast of mind. Ontario's Education Minister in 1965, William Davis, visited California with his Quebec counterpart to study junior colleges and the community college network introduced in Ontario owed its inspiration to California.

If the concept of constantly expanding education spending began in California, it is evident that the countervailing notion that there is a saturation point in education spending has taken hold in the state.

Spending on education is like any other form of expenditure. That proportion of it not financed through growth entails a displacement of fiscal resources devoted to other purposes. Many people in California have discovered that there are things they would rather spend their money on than education.

The disillusionment with education should not occasion astonishment. The partisans of education for decades have attributed to it more virtues than any purely human institution could possess. It was widely touted as the cure for unemployment and the antidote to such forms of social distress as crime, drug addiction and vagrancy. People fortified with education were proof against the vicissitudes of social fortune. When the education boom was getting nicely under way in 1961, its partisans assured the public that higher education spending would banish joblessness forever, but for the past year the Canadian rate of unemployment has been higher than in 1961, after 16 years of rapidly increasing expenditure on education.

In 1958-59, education in Canada absorbed $1.235 billion, and in 1978-79 Canadian education spending will have risen to more than $17 billion. In 1977-78, spending on education will have risen by an estimated $1.293 billion, which is more than was spent on it in 1958-59. Between 1958-59 and 1977-78, the number of students at post-secondary institutions in Canada rose from 107,000 to an estimated 634,000. The number of full-time teachers in Canada by 1977-78 had risen to 325,000.

The approval of the Jarvis-Gann Amendment is not the only evidence of rebellion against education spending in the United States.

In Oregon, all increases in local education spending above a modest level must be sanctioned by referenda, and repeatedly voters have rejected such spending increases. In the autumn of 1976, 10,000 Oregon children received no education for extended periods, because the schools they were attending ran out of funds. In Ohio, the Cleveland and Toledo school systems have been shut down for brief periods because of lack of funds, and both municipal governments and the state government have been reluctant to advance additional monies. In the autumn of 1975, the National Education Association in the United States found that 200,000 teachers were unable to find teaching positions, and a further 300,000 teachers had taken jobs in other fields owing to the shortage of teaching positions.

In California, municipalities have based assessment of property on market values and in the past four years as home prices soared, taxes have soared along with them. One family bought a house in West Los Angeles in 1961 for $50,000, and their property taxes have been rising by 33 per cent a year, in 1977 reaching $5,000 for one year. Like many other families, they found they might be forced to sell their house. Between 1966 and 1976 the per capita property tax collection in California rose by 110 per cent, which is not far from the U.S. national average of 111 per cent.

One of the leading factors in the steep rise in property tax rates in California has been the adoption of market-value assessment. Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough has been urging the adoption of market-value assessment in Ontario. Has anyone told Darcy what this kind of thing can lead to?

The Globe and Mail

We know what the attitude of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is toward obeying the letter of the law. We know from 419 cases of break-ins to search without a warrant; from about 1,000 more illegal break-ins to plant wiretaps; from who knows how many thousands of illegal mail openings; from the burning of a barn; from the theft of Parti Quebecois membership lists; from the illegal break-in at a left-wing news agency; from recruitment of informants through improper detention.

So the knowledge of an agreement whereby the Revenue Department gave the RCMP access to private income tax records has evoked a dismay not relieved by the assurance that only tax records relating to organized crime would be released.

That dismay has been confirmed. We now learn that tax records have been delivered where there is no link to tax evasion and where the alleged offence is no greater than conspiracy between a husband and wife to cheat on unemployment insurance. And that a former minister of national revenue declared the provision of records illegal in a letter to the then solicitor-general.

Are you, dear reader, still so sure the RCMP has never looked at your tax return? Or won't tomorrow?

OTTAWA — Small businessmen please note.

Your friendly federal government has set up a "Paperburden Office" in a last-ditch effort to undo some of the damage it's done to business these last 10 years.

The small and presumably temporary unit wants to provide information and quick action on problems involving red tape or confusing, duplicative or excessive paperwork.

All you have to do to get help is call 1-613-995-9197 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 eastern time, Monday to Friday.

An Ombudsman will listen to your case, go to work on your behalf, and if the problem is not solved within five days, provide you with a progress report and then follow up until the matter's resolved.

Former Finance Minister Don Macdonald is sticking his neck out by accepting a directorship in McDonnell Douglas, the big American company that is trying to sell its F-15 Eagle to the Department of National Defence to replace the aging Starfighter and Voodoo aircraft.

Big Mac appears to be in violation of the guidelines set down for ministers by Prime Minister Trudeau in his confidential memo of Oct. 18, 1976 (later tabled in the Commons).

Paragraph 3, Appendix III of the memo states that for two years an ex-minister must not "lobby for or on behalf of any person or commercial corporation before any department or agency with which he was employed or with which he had a substantial official relationship . . ."

As Finance Minister, Macdonald certainly had "a substantial official relationship" with National Defence. And although he may insist that the language of the directive is vague and ambiguous, and that he is not "lobbying", it will be difficult not to run afoul of the general proviso not to "appear to benefit" from his old connections.

Big Mac must know that the patriarch McDonnell is no altruist. When he puts a former Canadian finance minister on his board it's for one purpose — to help get the big 2.4 billion contract.

Typically Canadian is the best way to describe Consumer and Corporate Affairs' approach to the food problem.

It has just launched Food Talk/78, an expanded version of its "successful" summer program designed to show disadvantaged consumer groups how to save money when shopping for and preparing food.

Warren Allmand, the minister responsible, hopes "that by providing information about food and food buying, consumers will find new ways to help themselves to cut food costs . . ."

Meanwhile farmers have to bring workers from the Caribbean and Mexico to harvest the crops. So the poor consumer has to pay double. Once for the imported labor that does the work and once for the Canadian students who "talk" about it.

No wonder food prices continue to skyrocket?

one man's opinion

THERE IS NOT one of us without the basic flaws of mankind. If we protest to the contrary it is a protest filled with small white lies and should not be taken seriously. The last man (or woman) without fault met his end on a cross 1,978 years ago. Check yourself out on the little flaws.

I doubt there is a golfer alive who has not nudged his ball just a teensy bit in the rough at one time or another, or one who hasn't grounded his club in a hazard. . .

How many of you gals have snuck into the seven-items-or-less checkout lane at the supermarket while in possession of eight or even nine articles? And then tried to look nonchalant in the face of cold stares and mutterings from the other queued shoppers?. . .

Really, now, can you honestly say you have never told an ethnic joke? Or laughed at one?. . .

Have you ever secretly cheered against the B.C. Lions, or against the Vancouver Canucks or against the Montreal Expos?. . .

All protestations of morality aside, have you, sir, ever stolen just a quick glance at a Playboy centrefold and if so, why did your gaze linger for more than 15 seconds?. . .

If you are one of the more fortunate ones, have you been able not to brag about quitting smoking?. . .

AND, all good intentions to the contrary, did you ever win anything on a lottery and keep it secret? If so, you are a rarity according to lottery officials. . .

How many of you possess the honesty to tell the office offender his or her deodorant isn't working, or that they have bad breath or that they're using the wrong denture cream?. . .

How many of you, who own and take your dogs for nightly walks, have ever had just a small qualm about said pet excreting all over somebody else's front lawn, or ever stopped to remove said mess?. . .

Put up your hand if you fall into the category of all talk and no action when it comes to spending a few hours working on a charity drive. . .

Is there a politician alive who, in his campaign speeches, ever included a solid plank of refusing a salary increment if offered — after being elected? They all know the going rate while fighting for the office, but conveniently vote yes for increases when they are brought to the floor. . .

Are there those among you who have quoted the Bible during an argument while not having even reasonable knowledge of what the book is really all about?. . .

How many of you have touched a surface when the sign says, "wet paint?". . .

If you hail from the frozen tundra of the Prairies, how many of you managed the painful (and dumb) experience of getting your tongues stuck on frozen metal?. . .

HAVE YOU ever crossed the solid line on a highway and did you count your blessings when you made it safely back into the proper lane?. . .

When the waitress or waiter asks, "was the meal satisfactory, sir?," how many of you have had the temerity to say, "no, quite frankly, the steak wasn't done properly, the buns were stale and the coffee was cold.?". . .

Did you ever cheat in a school exam or pilfer a chocolate bar from the corner grocery?. . .

When it comes time to discuss a wine with a meal, have you ever admitted you don't really know a damned thing about wine?. . .

Have you ever accepted either a speeding or parking ticket with good grace and without offering up an argument because you knew your were in the wrong?. . .

Sirs, have you ever been guilty of the faux pas of wearing brown shoes with a dark blue suit?. . .

When a recorded message comes on a telephone, have you ever blurted out, "thank you" when the message was over?. . .

Have you ever broken the law by drinking hard booze in a public place such as a football or baseball park?. . .

Have you ever harbored secret guilt for having voted for P.E. Trudeau?. . .

If a former serviceman, can you truthfully state you have never embellished your accomplishments during the war?. . .

Aw, come on, you mean to say you really like the taste of beer?. . .

Have you, while deploring the violence in hockey, ever jumped to the edge of your seat when a fight breaks out on the ice?. . .

Have you ever had the uncharitable thought, or asked the question, why would a municipality have to send a mayor — and two aldermen — to a mayor's conference in some other city?. . .

And, have you ever read this column and not muttered, "what a soft touch, I could do at least as well every day of the week.?". . .

To the editor

Colony

So our government has hired a Frenchman to develop a province-wide system of instruction in the French language, for both French and English speaking youngsters, at a salary of $31,000 a year.

Is that what the people we call Canadians are paying their high taxes for?

What has Mr. Trudeau offered Premier Bennett to allow this effort in his (the PM's) determination to make the French president a present of Canada as his new colony?

Will the U.S.A. enjoy having a French colony practically bankrupt next door? Will they be able to pay the interest on the millions Canada owes the States — let alone the principal?

Who does Canada belong to? Does it not already belong to the U.S.A.? Will the French president be pleased to receive a land so deeply in debt to another country?

What, one wonders, is England thinking about this medley of affairs. This game of chess with one of her possessions? We would like to hear from her, or does she think the loss of Canada would be good riddance, of a fickle, apathetic, unpatriotic crowd of numbskulls. One also wonders if our minister of "education" is also being bribed to carry this through — what will he get for his good offices to help Trudeau's unpatriotic behavior.

If this goes through it is to be hoped that teachers will be found who can teach the French grammar better than the present so-called teachers who are teaching English grammar, which many, apparently do not understand or cannot take the trouble to enforce upon their pupils.

Another monster

The introduction of Bill 19 by the minister of municipal affairs is not a blessing. The only feature on the positive side is that it removes transit from Hydro.

On the negative side, the change builds in the creation of two more levels of bureaucratic involvement thus producing in the region of 3,000 additional non-productive jobs. These, of course, will entail:

(a) Increased public debt;
(b) Increased taxes;
(c) Increased fares;
(d) Increased fragmentation;
(e) Increased delays in decisions and procedures;
(f) Ultimate collapse of the system.

As things are, routes and services are not where people are, or want to go, but figments of what is convenient to the officers and staff as the least disruption of their day. Sometimes it seems to be that the attitude is "the public be damned."

In this instance, the NDP appears to be perfectly correct in its concern and suspicion of the sagasity, motives, intentions and methods of all the persons involved. Another monster we do not need!

Too well-versed to applaud Lea

An open letter to Graham Lea, (NDP Prince Rupert):

It's time a "legal secretary" put you in your place, my friend. When it comes to conveyancing there are experts, and those who think they are. Which are you? I've been deeply involved with conveyancing for 15 years. As each year passes, I learn more and find out how much I don't know. Have legal secretaries set up their own conveyancing offices? Sounds great on the surface, and will no doubt cause you to receive many accolades from the uninitiated and the junior who believes he/she is knowledgeable. One from me? Not on a bet.

I happen to be well known and, I believe, respected in my community. Clients that I have had the pleasure of assisting my principals in serving over the years frequently send flowers and glowing letters of praise. Dinner is not uncommon. Other solicitors' offices treat me with respect. It is not unusual for me to receive a phone call from a solicitor or his conveyancer asking me what would be the most expedient way to handle a file.

Do I fancy myself as the ultimate conveyancer? I am as good as my principals. Can I take funds into my trust account? Would I as a legal assistant? No. I honestly feel that if you were to poll the senior legal assistants (not legal secretaries) you would find that an overwhelming majority of those in my profession would chastise you for being so ignorant as to believe that we would convey property without the protection of a solicitor, his liability insurance and most importantly his knowledge of the law.

Miss a completion date and you're in trouble; don't forget about judgments, dyking certificates, and all the attendant documents and information necessary to convey with expertise. Approximately 30 per cent of all claims against the insurance fund (of the law society) are for faulty conveyancing.

I am too well-versed in the practice of conveyancing to applaud you.

I regret your apparent ignorance of this area of the law.

Inflation fighters

Most of us like to get on the bandwagon, or even drive it. Well, there is one organization in our midst that consistently does just that. I refer to the Help End Inflation Association.

When they started up, the association pointed out the excess government spending about three years ago, and the government is only just getting around to recognizing its own errors. The association also started the idea of keeping inflation down to six per cent now, and ending it by 1980 — sometime before the six per cent idea only dawned on the federal government.

Canadians, as a whole, take their politics in a somewhat haphazard manner — this, in spite of the fact that it affects all of us closely. They tend to give it their attention once every four years and let George do it for the next four. Well it was bound to happen that a smart lad would see the possibilities in this situation and use them.

The Help End Inflation Association urges everyone to write letters to their MPs about excess government spending. If you don't want your name used, just sign it John Smith. If your MP gets a few thousand signed with this original title he'll get the message.

Civic Scene

by Hubert Beyer

If you read Jim Hume's column last Sunday, my advice is: forget that you did.

It seems my colleague has finally succumbed to the adage that you can't fight city hall.

He went to great length explaining that property taxes can't be reduced without severely crippling the lifestyle of every citizen.

It was the California vote on the now famous Proposition 13 which prompted his reflective thoughts on the inevitability of death and taxes.

Maybe his exposure to the insanity that is provincial politics in this province has been getting him down, but I'd like to cheer him up and tell him that the frightening increase in property taxes can and will be halted.

Certainly the effects will be drastic, but when people reach the point where they no longer can afford to pay property taxes they will revolt just as they did in California.

I agree with Jim in one respect: Progressive-Conservative leader Vic Stephens won't be leading the revolt. For one thing, his hint that he might burn his tax notice was not the most intelligent remark.

Furthermore, the time for a taxpayers' revolt in this province hasn't come yet. At the moment, property taxes are a little more than one per cent of assessed value, the level at which California taxes will be pegged as a result of Proposition 13 and its approval by voters.

So while taxes are high, they represent nowhere near the burden Californians were saddled with.

But I can see no relief in sight from spiralling taxes. It won't be long before property taxes will be two per cent of assessed value and that's when people will really start hurting.

Those on fixed income hurt already. Last week I had a call from an elderly gentleman who told me his property taxes had tripled in five years. He was retired and lived on an inadequate pension. He said he couldn't even afford today's newspaper. "I get yesterday's from a neighbor."

He was convinced that two more years of rising taxes would push him right out of his home because he wouldn't be able to pay the taxes any longer. And that's the point at which people will rebel.

Nobody says that municipalities will be able to hold the line on taxes without cutting services. And there are numerous possibilities for curtailing services.

For starters, there is no reason in the world why municipalities should cut the grass on boulevards. The city might have to eliminate most of the flower beds in Beacon Hill Park and sow grass instead.

Through attrition, the staff might have to be reduced, and that's where we could make the biggest dent in the tax roll.

Recent studies alleged that class size has hardly any effect on the learning process. The time will come when people will give serious consideration to making classes of 40 students the norm, rather than the exception.

None of these things are considered ideal solutions, but when we reach the point where people stand to lose their homes because they can't afford to pay their taxes, they'll demand drastic measures.

And that's where I think Jim missed the point of Proposition 13 completely. The California vote was a dramatic manifestation of the peoples' frustration. And when people here reach that point, their verdict will be equally dramatic.

Stephens was a bit early, but three of four years from now his war cry might be heeded by every property taxpayer in B.C.

Homeowners with 99-year leases will get the homeowners grant, charges to the contrary notwithstanding.

Received a press release last week from Charles Barber, New Democratic Party MLA for Victoria, which berated the provincial government in general and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis in particular for having "betrayed" the people who have 99-year leases on their property.

Barber made reference to "neglect or maladministration, or both," adding that the government didn't intend to pay the grant to leaseholders.

But a quick telephone check with Curtis' office confirmed that leaseholders will get the tax rebate.

Curtis said originally he had hoped to deal with the matter by changing certain regulations, but subsequently it was found that an amendment to the provincial Homeowners' Grant Act was necessary.

The amendment, said Curtis, would be introduced in this session, most likely in an omnibus bill near the end of the session.

"I made a commitment and I will keep it," Curtis said.

Buyers urged to snub stores open on Sunday

I'm very concerned about the ever increasing violation of the Lord's Day Act in Victoria and Greater Victoria area. By just going through one of the local papers on the weekend I noticed approximately 100 violations of the act which reads in part:

See sec. 4. It is not lawful for any person on the Lord's Day, except as provided herein, or in any provincial act or law in force on or after the 1st day of March 1907, to sell or offer for sale or purchase any goods, chattels, or other personal property or any real estate, or to carry on or transact any business of his ordinary calling, or in connection with such calling, or for gain to do, or employ any other person to do, on that day, any work, business, or labor. R.S., c. 171, s.4.

Further sec. 8: (1) It is not lawful for any person to advertise in any manner whatever any performance or other thing prohibited by this act.

As long as the courts of the land call upon God's name i.e. as when a witness is called to testify "to tell the truth and nothing but the truth so help me God," and the touching of the Bible, this Lord's Day Act should not be violated.

The Lord God who set aside one day out of seven to rest, knew very well us human beings needed to get our batteries recharged both physically and spiritually. It is good for the godly and ungodly—believer and unbeliever.

The main offenders are real estate companies and supermarkets (including furniture stores and lately electric/plumbing supply stores.) Most of them are guilty on both counts as they advertise and offer for sale on Sunday.

We as citizens are to obey the laws of the land and if the penalties (due to inflation) are not severe enough, then they should be reviewed and increased accordingly, Mayor Jack Volrich of Vancouver suggested last year that fines should be increased to $3,000 for business contravening the Lord's Day Act.

The attorney-general wrote me about a year ago that his department is working on the problem.

Until he has it solved we as private citizens should band together and boycott these businesses which contravene the Lord's Day Act. Let's be people of principle and inform them that we will take our business elsewhere as long as they continue to flout the Lord's Day Act. Please do all you can do to stop this practise.

Let's keep Sunday a day of rest.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — Sharp gains in oil issues sent the Toronto stock market to its highest in more than four years at the close of active trading Wednesday.

The TSE 300 index was at its highest since April 19, 1974, despite a drop in the Dow Jones industrial index at New York.

Analysts said the advance was sparked by Occidental Petroleum Corp.'s proposed takeover of Husky Oil Ltd. and rumors of similar undertakings among other integrated oil companies.

A total of 883 contracts were traded on the options market, up from 836 Tuesday.

Brenda Mines Ltd. topped the 106 block trades with 22,900 shares at $11.00 a share.

Husky Oil Ltd. slipped 37 cents to $46.88 a share on the sale of 205,105 shares, making it the session's most active industrial. A total of 33 blocks of Husky shares traded at prices ranging from $46.00 to $47.00, but the largest totalled only 7,100 shares.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Casino-gambling issues got most of the play again Wednesday as the New York Stock Exchange turned in a mixed showing in a busy session.

Gambling-related stocks, one of the market's hottest groups this year with the opening of the first casino in Atlantic City, N.J., dominated the active list.

Caesars World showed a 2⅜ gain at 27¼; Playboy Enterprises rose 1½ to 17⅜; Bally Manufacturing was up ¾ at 35½; and Del E. Webb climbed 1⅜ to 18¾.

Ramada Inns, which purchased just under 630,000 Del Webb shares earlier this year, was the volume leader among NYSE issues, up 2 at 7¾.

Resorts International said Wednesday its profits would rise sharply this year because of earnings from the casino it opened just before the U.S. Memorial Day weekend in Atlantic City.

Late in the day an investment group said it has sued Caesars World over an Atlantic City hotel lease.

Among Canadian issues on the New York Stock Exchange, Inco dropped ⅛ to $17 and Seagrams dropped ⅛ to $24⅜.

Dome Petroleum rose ⅜ to $78 and Alcan was up ⅛ to $28¼.

June car sales rise in U.S.

DETROIT (UPI) — The Big Four automakers Wednesday reported car sales got off to a good start in June, jumping 2.2 percent ahead of last year's early June pace.

Combined sales of domestic passenger cars in the first 10 days of the month totaled 283,274 units compared with 277,194 a year ago. There were nine business days in both periods.

Only General Motors posted a sales decline compared with last year's figures.

APPOINTMENT

BILL FIFE
F.R.I., R.I. (B.C.)

The Board of Directors of Capital City Realty Ltd. announce the appointment of BILL FIFE as Executive Administrator. Mr. Fife will be responsible for the expansion of the company's real estate division at "Capital House," the company's new head office now under construction on Blanshard Street.

Bill has been associated with the real estate industry for many years. Before joining Capital City Realty he was the branch manager for a large public real estate corporation. Bill Fife is a member of the Victoria Real Estate Board of which he is presently vice-president, a past-president of the Real Estate Credit Union, a member of the the Real Estate Institute of British Columbia and a fellow of the Real Estate Institute of Canada.

Bill's expertise will be an invaluable asset to the growth of Capital City Realty and we are indeed proud that he joined Victoria's fastest-growing real estate organization.

In his capacity as Executive Administrator, Bill will provide unlimited management services to Capital City Realty's forty real estate professionals and will also expand the company's colourful Realty One Hundred franchise operation.

If you have any questions about Capital City Realty or the unique exclusive benefits from the Realty One Hundred concept . . . give Bill a call. Telephone anytime, office 388-7557 — residence 479-6880.

Th...th...that's all—Volks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Volkswagen assembly plant for Canada's West Coast is economically illogical, Bruno Rubess, president of Volkswagen Canada, said Tuesday.

"It would be mad, wishful dreaming, economically illogical," he said in a telephone interview from Toronto after Liberal leader Gordon Gibson told the legislature in Victoria that British Columbia was "high on the short list of potential locations" for a second Volkswagen manufacturing plant in North America.

"Why ever should we want a manufacturing plant on the West Coast when the major markets are Ontario and Quebec—or 2,000 miles away in California?" asked Rubess.

On Monday Premier Bennett, replying to Gibson because Economic Development Minister Don Phillips was away, said he did not want to make "a premature announcement."

In Toronto, Rubess said, "I think whoever invented this rumor is dreaming. Some components would come from the mother plant (in West Germany). Do you really think we'd ship engines and components to the east coast, then transport them to the west coast, then send the product back to the major markets?"

Rubess said speculation started after Toni Schmuecker, chairman of the board of management and chief executive officer, told a news conference in the United States April 10 that if Volkswagen sales continued as at present a second manufacturing plant would be needed in North America besides the one now in operation 100 kilometres from Pittsburgh.

Rubess said these projections "are only theoretical. . .there's no decision at this time."

Rubess said if ever a plant is located on the West Coast it would be close to the major markets "and that means California, not British Columbia."

Exports up almost 14%

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value of exports produced or processed in British Columbia was $1.56 billion for the first quarter of 1978, an increase of 13.9 per cent from the corresponding 1977 period, the Employers' Council of B.C. said Wednesday.

The council said in a news release that the increase compares favorably with an increase in Canadian exports of 12.1 per cent during the first quarter of 1978.

Dick Bryan, economic research director for the council, said that while the dollar value of exports increased, the volume of most of B.C.'s major export products decreased.

The value of lumber exports was up 24.6 per cent and paper exports increased in value by 25.2 per cent.

The council said that while the total value of B.C. exports increased, goods exported to Western Europe declined by 7.7 per cent during the first quarter of the year.

The council's report was prepared using Statistics Canada data.

Master Charge loses over 50¢ service bite

NEW YORK (AP) — Chalk one up for the little guy.

A Long Island divorce lawyer took the second largest commercial bank in the United States to court and won the first round. Not only for himself, but for several hundred thousand other people as well.

"It's proof the consumer does have rights; it tells the banks they can't push the little guy around," said Richard Ostor of Garden City, N.Y., discussing his victory.

That victory came Monday when a judge ruled that Citibank had to refund 50-cent-a-month service fees it had imposed for 20 months on its Master Charge customers who paid their bills promptly and, therefore, did not incur finance charges.

In April 1976, however, Citibank announced the 50-cent fee. "I was annoyed," Ostor recalled. "I was very annoyed. I thought their action was completely illegal. I wanted to make a stand."

Citibank said the fee was necessary to offset rising costs. The idea of "service charges" for the previously free bank cards was expected to spread.

Other financial institutions did not follow the Citibank lead, however. And last January, Citibank itself dropped the 50-cent promptness payment. The bank conceded consumers had objected to the charge, although it declined to say whether it lost customers because of it.

A Citicorp spokesman said the bank will appeal the ruling by Justice Andrew DiPaola of the New York state Supreme Court, the first rung of New York's legal ladder.

A second bank spokesman said that about one-third of Citibank's 1 million Master Charge cardholders would be affected. A spokesman for DiPaola said the ruling would mean reimbursement "of at least $1 million to $2 million."

Seattle's Pier 66 to grow

SEATTLE (AP) — A Vancouver business group plans to build a $15 million marine-oriented tourist complex at Seattle's Pier 66, say Port of Seattle officials.

The new development proposal by the Pier Sixty-Six Corp. of British Columbia calls for Pier 66, now used as port headquarters, to be converted into a "marine-oriented tourist business," with restaurants, shops, offices, docking facilities and extensive parking.

The port would keep its executive offices at the pier. The development mainly would effect the lower-level portions along the waterfront.

Renovation of the Bell Street Terminal has been planned for some time, but port commissioners said they had been unable to work out an agreement with private firms.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts Wednesday at the Calgary public stockyards of 655 head consisted of a light run of slaughter steers, heifers and cows which met a moderate trade from local buyers. Slaughter steers traded $1 higher. Slaughter heifers of average condition sold steady. Slaughter cows of all grades remained steady to Tuesday afternoon sales. There were too few bologna bulls on offer to quote prices. A1-2 steers over 1,000 pounds 65-66.50, A1-2 under 1,000 pounds 62-65. A1-2 heifers over 850 pounds 61.50-63. A1-2 under 850 pounds 60-62. LOOKING FOR SOME ATTRACTIVE CONTEMPORARY OFFICE SPACE?

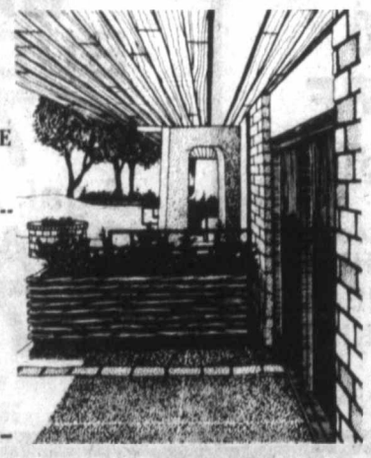
Consider Stadacona Centre



Ideal for office or professional space, STADACONA CENTRE is located close to downtown -- five minutes by bus or car -- and is adjacent to beautiful Stadacona Park (perfect for lunchtime strolling or after-hours tennis).

Office spaces range from compact to spacious. All are situated in the same development with a new neighbourhood shopping centre and 100 condominium units.

Stadacona Centre is the only major office/retail development in this densley populated area of Victoria.

Other features include:

* Maximum exposure, with high traffic counts on Fort and Pandora
* Easy access from Oak Bay, Uplands, Rockland, Jubilee and Fernwood areas
* Beautiful landscaping and architectural details
* Attractive store/office fronts and signage space
* Lots of underground parking

Canadian Pacific Ltd., perhaps taking advantage of bargain prices, keeps nibbling away at MacMillan Bloedel. CP has acquired another 111,100 shares of the B.C. forestry king's issued voting shares since January and at the end of April held 2,960,700 or about 13.5%.

The most recent report on insider trading issued by the B.C. Superintendent of Brokers office shows CP added 3,000 shares in April. The entire holding of MB cost CP about $85 million and at current market value, is worth only about $58 million today.

Still, when about 13.5% speaks at a board meeting, you can rest assured it's listened to.

There are many other items of interest on the insider list. Exxon added a mere 5,500 class B shares of Imperial Oil Ltd. to its portfolio and now holds 90.7 million such shares.

Her Majesty the Queen in Right of the Province of British Columbia (that's how they put it) sold or otherwise disposed of 1,137,125 shares of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. Those shares went to help set up the new B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

□

The Occidental-Husky shares exchange as proposed earlier this week is not simple. At first glance what appears to be a $44.70-per-share offer by Occidental is 30 cents shy of the Petro-Canada $45 offer.

The two U.S.-owned companies point out, however, that the exchange of shares would be tax-free in the U.S., where more than 65 per cent of Husky's shares are held. Further, Occidental's package will provide dividends of $4.35 a share, compared to Petro-Can's present $1 (Canadian) dividend.

□

This is the week that those ever-so-rare Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce rights are on sale at Canadian stock exchanges. Trading for cash expires at the close next Monday, the same time as the offer ends.

CIBC, whose last rights offer took place in 1958, has allowed shareholders of record of May 12, 1978 to purchase one new share at $24 for each eight shares held up until June 19. Current price for the common shares is $28⅜.

Pemberton Securities' recent newsletter points out a unique feature with regard to the issuance of bank equity. One provision, they point out, of the Bank Act requires that when a bank issues new shares, such shares must be offered on a pro-rata basis to existing shareholders — or a rights issue.

Less well known is the provision that allows an investor buying such shares through the exercising of rights, to pay for the shares over 10 months.

The investor puts down 10% of the purchase price and follows with nine equal monthly installments. The purchaser does not receive any share certificates until the full amount is paid and during the nine-month payment period he receives dividends only in proportion to the paid-up equity in the shares. But no interest can be charged on the unpaid balance and the outstanding amount owed may be cleared off at any time during the payment period.

Afton deal approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Afton Mines Ltd. approved at a meeting Tuesday a plan to replace the company's bank loans with $80 million of income debentures in United States funds, effectively reducing the interest rate on its borrowings by about four percentage points.

Normal B. Keevil, Jr., president, had said earlier that the switch would result in a cash flow savings of about $3.2 million in Afton's first full year of operation (the mine has been producing since last December), equivalent to about 84 cents a share.

Shareholders also approved a partnership agreement between Afton and Teck Corp. Ltd..

Earnings

Crush International Ltd., six months ended May 3: 1978, $1,429,000, 34 cents a share; 1977, $1,186,000, 28 cents.

Domco Industries Ltd., six months ended April 30: 1978, $129,562, 11 cents a share; 1977, $331,045, 28 cents.

John Labatt Ltd., year ended April 30: 1978, $33,895,000, $2.53 a share; 1977, $28,065,000, $2.12.

Aquatic scientists plan Victoria huddle

More than 700 experts in oceanography and limnology (its fresh-water equivalent) will gather in Victoria next week for the 41st annual meeting of the American Society of Limnology and Oceanography.

Theme of the four-day meeting is improving communications between the society, which is a biological association of aquatic scientists, and experts in the physical-chemical disciplines.

Co-sponsored by the University of Victoria and the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, the meeting will feature 250 oral presentations, more than 250 poster displays and three symposiums.

The symposiums will concentrate on differences in time and space scales in physical and biological oceanography, the biological effects of metals and the movement of materials between air and water and between water and sediment in aquatic systems.

Other topics include freshwater and marine chemistry, sediments, pollution, fisheries, and phosphates.

Opening the meeting Monday, will be Dr. P. Larkin of the University of British Columbia, Dr. H. Regier of the University of Toronto, and Dr. R. Dugdale of the Bigelow Laboratory of Ocean Sciences who will speak on the relationship of limnology and oceanography to fisheries.

DUGOUT THREE SAY ALL'S WELL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three persons travelling to Hawaii in a hand-carved dugout canoe transmitted their first radio message in more than two weeks on Tuesday night.

The message: "All is well, all is normal and we're heading to San Francisco" was received by the marine coast guard radio here, but the transmission was not good enough to make a telephone patch-up, a spokesman said.

He said the Orenda, with Geordie Tocher, Karin Lind and Gerhard Kiesel, all from the Vancouver area, aboard, was 400 kilometres northwest of San Francisco.

Last Sunday, the rescue co-ordination centre in Victoria received a message from the Orenda, relayed through a passing ship, that it could receive messages on the radio but not transmit.

Suggestions pooled

A mural with an aquatic scene at the Gordon Head swimming pool and more tropical plants at the entrance to Cedar Hill community centre are among suggestions made by supervisors of Saanich's three major recreation facilities for improving attendance.

The proposals were presented to Saanich's recreation committee Tuesday by recreation director William Young.

Young said admission fees were being held at the lowest level possible to encourage attendance.

Improvements to facilities now under way include a lounge at the Pearkes arena, a sauna-whirlpool at Gordon Head recreation centre and a driving range at the Cedar Hill golf course, he said.

Suggestions also included signs at major traffic locations near the facilities, piped-in music in the lobbies of all centres, upgrading of exteriors, showers, washrooms, and portable stairs for the handicapped.

Arson suspected as greenhouse gutted in fire

Fire Chief Art Fryer of Saanich said Wednesday that arson was suspected in a blaze early Monday morning at a garage-greenhouse-shed complex at Jefferson and Torquay.

About $10,000 damage was done to a garage, greenhouse and two sheds at 1744 Jefferson and 4111 Torquay in a fire shortly after 1 a.m. Monday.

Fryer said the fire was probably set in a fence separating the sheds. The greenhouse, owned by Salvatore Barone, was gutted and the garage, two sheds and a large fir tree, owned by Garry and Joan Moore, were destroyed. A truck housed in the garage was also destroyed.

Saanich fire investigators narrowed the cause of a $70,000 fire Monday afternoon to cigarette ashes or electrical wiring on a work bench in the basement of 1988 Woodley.

The fire started in the home of Dr. James Bell about 5:30 p.m. but the couple and their six children escaped uninjured after smelling smoke and discovering flames coming from the basement. The fire spread to the stairwell and kitchen before firemen were able to control it.

RCMP 'ORGANIZED TERRORISM ITSELF'

OTTAWA (CP) — A former Quebec terrorist Wednesday accused the RCMP of being "organized terrorism itself" and of continuing to harass him and his wife for crimes he committed more than 15 years ago.

"You have to draw the line," Jean Castonguay, 36, said just before leaving the witness stand after a day of testimony before the McDonald royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

"My wife, myself and my two cats have been harassed since 1968 . . . I just want to live a normal life, lovingly, peacefully."

Castonguay was released from jail in 1968 after serving four years for possession of dynamite and attempted armed robbery. But he said he had had no involvement with terrorism since then.

He was appearing before the commission to tell about an incident in October, 1971, when he was approached by the Mounties and asked to become an informer. But he said he had a few things to add.

Castonguay told the commission that he was imprisoned for 12 days during the October Crisis in Quebec in 1970 and his wife had been jailed for eight days.

He said the RCMP was created as the North West Mounted Police in 1873 "to murder francophones in Western Canada."

"I am accusing the RCMP for being organized terrorism itself," he said.

The commission chairman, Alberta Supreme Court Justice David McDonald, told Castonguay that if he had any evidence to back up such charges, he should present it to commission lawyer Ross Goddwin.

Castonguay said he hoped that a parallel Quebec inquiry into the RCMP, temporarily stalled because of a court challenge by the federal government, would get started again. The real story about the RCMP would come out there, not at the McDonald inquiry, he said.

Earlier, Castonguay asked the commission to observe one minute of silence for "political prisoners" being held in federal prisons in Quebec.

Castonguay
...'have to draw line'

He said thousands of Quebecers would demonstrate for the unconditional release of the prisoners, some of whom have been held in prison for 14 years.

McDonald said Castonguay could mark the occasion if he wished.

Castonguay earlier answered the questions about his past from RCMP lawyer Pierre Lamontagne, who earlier had called him "a liar" and insisted that the commission must hear details of his past.

The demand split the commission. McDonald and commissioner Donald Rickerd of Toronto allowed the questions but commissioner Guy Gilbert of Montreal and commission counsel Ross Goodwin questioned their relevance.

The argument over Lamontagne's questions came because Castonguay's testimony was not contradictory to that of two RCMP officers who appeared before the commission last month. He reiterated their testimony that they had stopped him Oct. 20, 1971, as he returned from work, took him for a coffee, and tried to recruit him as an informer. He told them he wasn't interested but agreed to meet them a few days later. He did so, telling them again that he wasn't interested—that he had lost interest in 1968.

The Mounties had testified that Castonguay seemed apprehensive at the first meeting and that after the second, he asked permission to call his wife. They said they learned later that she was ready to send in Montreal police and a lawyer if he hadn't called.

Castonguay said he thought he was going to be framed on a drug charge the first time he was picked up. He didn't know what the Mounties wanted.

He said that he did not feel free to leave the hotel room, where he was alone with two Mounties. This is an important issue for the inquiry, because questions of abduction arise. The Mounties have insisted that Castonguay and others they tried to recruit as informers were always free to leave.

Castonguay said he and a few other young men in their early 20s formed a group in 1963 after reading a radical paper advocating violence to end "slave-like conditions in Quebec."

"That's how it all began. We were young idealists. Naive. We decided to change the world. It was an ideal which was doomed to failure."

They were arrested a few hours after stealing some dynamite and in 1964, Castonguay was sent to prison for four years. He served the full sentence.

He denied that he continued his terrorist career when he was released in 1968. He said he travelled Quebec in 1969, trying to raise money for "political prisoners" still behind bars, but raised little.

Energy flicks

The centre for Energy Conservation with the co—operation of the National Film Board will be presenting a three—week noon—hour movie series from June 27 to July 13.

Movies will be shown on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week, starting at 12:05 each day at the NFB Theatre, 811 Wharf.

Subjects covered by the series include looks at Canada's energy usage and wastage; alternative energy technologies; some philosophical approaches to energy usage and choices and decisions to must make in an energy consuming society.

Canada is the highest per capita energy user in the world while Sweden, with roughly the same climate and level of technology, uses almost half the energy Canada does yet their living standard does not seem to be any lower.

Newfie 'boom' linked to Soviet test

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A loud boom April 2 that blew apart a shed and knocked out electrical power to some houses on Bell Island 15 kilometres north of here has been attributed to a radio wave from the Soviet Union, an Ottawa scientist says.

An experimental radio wave of Extremely Low Frequency probably interacted with an iron-ore body on Bell Island, says a report prepared by the Planetary Association for Clean Energy of Ottawa.

Association director Andrew Michrowski said in a telephone interview from Ottawa on Wednesday that the Russians had been experimenting since 1976 with transmission of E.L.F. waves which have a strength of up to 40 million watts.

Michrowski said a station in Havana had been known to co-operate with Soviet Union radio experiments.

The association report says Bell Island lies on the route between a transmitting station at Gomel in the Soviet Union and Havana.

Michrowski said one of the properties of an E.L.F. wave is that a breakdown can occur in an area where there is a reasonably smooth reflecting surface, such as an iron-ore body.

A loud hum preceding the blast as reported by Bell Island residents is a known characteristic of such breakdowns, he added.

Several hens were killed when a shed was knocked apart, and three circular holes in the ground, each about 18 inches deep and forming a triangle, were found in the woods behind a house.

The planetary association report says the holes support the Soviet radio-wave theory. It says the wave broke into a "plasmic" explosion which hit the ground in a perfect equilateral triangle formation.

Saanich mulls four-month water billing

Saanich's existing two-monthly system of water billing will be changed to a four-month pattern if council adopts a finance committee recommendation.

The only condition placed on the proposed change is that any resulting staff reductions be achieved through normal attrition.

The current system requires a staff of nine, two of are employed full-time in reading the 22,000 meters once every two months.

Municipal controller-treasurer Roy Broughton told aldermen Tuesday there were several advantages to a frequent reading and billing system. Leaks and defective meters can be discovered early and minimize the loss to both the customer and the municipality. In addition, the present system minimizes special readings and collection problems, especially those relating to rental properties.

Broughton said staff could be reduced by two if a three-month system was adopted and by almost half under the proposed scheme. Two senior staff members retire this year and three others are filling established positions with the department on a temporary basis.

Warning of potential problems in adopting the new policy, Broughton said it would take longer to discover leaks and this could result in customers incurring a greater expense for lost water, and in the collection of arrears.

Blast kills 17 police

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — At least 17 military policemen were killed Wednesday when a hand grenade was thrown into their bus by unidentified persons who escaped in a car, police said.

Seven other persons were reported injured in the attack on the south side of Guatemala's capital. The military police were leaving a water-bottling plant.

REGION DIALS FOR '911' COST

If the cost is reasonable, Greater Victoria municipalities may be interested in adopting 911 as the over-all emergency telephone number for fire, police and ambulance assistance.

The Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee wants information from B.C. Tel on how much it would cost to set up such a system in Greater Victoria.

Two years ago, the committee rejected the idea because the cost would have been too high, but B.C. Tel said at the time that initial installation costs would be reduced once it had switched over to new equipment.

Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons told the committee that similar systems had been introduced in Vancouver and Kamloops.

U.S. Senate appears ready again

New Black Monday coming?

By STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although the blood is not dry on the carpet from last time, the Senate may be getting near another Black Monday.

FOR THOSE who cannot or would rather not recall, the day came about a year ago when a pair of old hands gunned down two of the new boys in town on the Senate floor.

By the time Vice President Walter Mondale and Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd got through, there wasn't much left of Sens. James Abourezk and Howard M. Metzenbaum, both D-Ohio.

THEIR "filibuster by amendment" — which had tied the Senate in knots — was in a shambles.

Steamrolled by the Mondale-Byrd tactics on the floor and deserted by President Carter, Abourezk and Metzenbaum had no choice.

They gave up. The filibuster ended and legislation approving the deregulation of natural gas was approved.

WITH MONDALE acting as a willing pawn in his capacity as presiding officer of the Senate, Byrd got the rulings that allowed him to dump — one a second — the amendments which the liberals were hoarding.

Although it was a last resort move by Byrd, dictated by his desire to push through some form of an energy package, it left a sour taste in the Senate.

There were immediate formations of ad hoc committees to study and find ways to avoid a repetition — not of the way Abourezk and Metzenbaum were shot down but of making a "filibuster by amendment" impossible.

THE NOVEL filibuster was preceded by the classic type in which the liberals prevented a vote with lengthy speeches. But that ended when 60 senators voted to shut them up.

Once cloture is imposed, each senator is allowed only an hour of debate which cannot be transferred and — in the past — that had always been enough to bring a final vote.

But Abourezk and Metzenbaum had filed some 200 amendments, each of them valid for consideration.

THAT MEANT the possibility of votes, votes to reconsider, appeals, quorum calls and the prospect of weeks and weeks of senators rushing to and from the floor before a judgment could be reached and other bills brought up.

It was an intolerable situation which made a mockery of the cloture rule by which 60 senators could put a stop to a filibuster.

But the various informal committees never came back with remedies, which is the reason that the Senate may find itself in another Black Monday situation.

THE SENATE is once again embroiled in another of its periodic filibusters — this time on revisions in the labor laws.

The filibuster is still in its classic stage because, despite some tries, the supporters of the bill have not been able to muster 60 votes.

They may never pull it off, one way of averting a second Black Monday.

But if cloture is imposed, the conservatives leading the filibuster are ready to take the Abourezk-Metzembaum primer and use it for their own purposes. They have some 500 amendments to play with.

IN THE ABSENCE of new rules, Byrd may once again have to become the unpopular gunslinger.

Or, as a Democrat said only half jokingly, "We've got Fritz Mondale warming up in the bullpen again."

Family court revamp begins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz of the British Columbia Supreme Court says he has organized a committee of judges from the supreme, provincial and county courts to examine ways of establishing a unified family court in B.C.

The new court would permit family law matters to be handled in one court under one set of judges, rather than through the present system of one or more courts, Chief Justice Nemetz said in a news release.

The newly-formed judicial committee, chaired by Justice Richard Anderson of the B.C. Supreme Court, includes county court Judge D. H. Campbell and provincial court Judge William Selbie. It was formed by Chief Justice Nemetz at the request of federal Justice Minister Ron Basford and B.C. Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

The committee will assess the work of the experimental family court in Hamilton-Wentworth, Ont. and other Canadian family courts and make recommendations and proposals on how one could be established here, the chief justice said.

"It will start in a small way and develop through the province as facilities and personnel become available," Chief Justice Nemetz said.

One more time

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — For his next act, (Country) Bill White, a Westville, Fla., stuntman and alligator wrestler, said he would jump out of an airplane in a car.

Country Bill set a new world record Monday night for being buried alive, having lived for 134 days, two hours and 53 minutes buried two metres below ground in the backyard of radio station WBSM in New Bedford.

Later this summer, White said, he will team up with Nic Knievel, brother of motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel. Together they will drive a car into a transport plane, roll out of the aircraft in midair and parachute to ground while still inside the car. Details on the logistics of the stunt are still sketchy.

Before this stunt, Country Bill will spend more time in a box. A few minutes after he climbed out of his coffin in New Bedford, White crawled back into another plywood box mounted on the back of a pickup truck.

If all goes as planned, White said in a few days he and his box would arrive in Dover, Del., where he again would be buried, this time alongside Don (The Dude) Dashiell, a radio disc jockey who has been underground since May 20 at a trailer park. The two will emerge together July 1, Country Bill said.

All systems no without prop and batteries

Environmentalist Derrick Mallard wants to hear from anyone with spare propeller blades, batteries and anything else in good working order that could be put to use in building windmill generators and solar energy collectors.

If you have any cash you wish to donate towards the promotion of alternative renewable energy sources then Mallard and his Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.) want to hear from you even more.

Mallard and his environmental group have received about $15,000 from the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources for a four-month alternative energy technology demonstration project which is to show how solar and wind energy can be used in this area. But the $15,000 just covers the salaries of the six-person project along with basic operating costs. About $9,000 more, either in cash or supplies, is needed to construct the two windmill generators and two solar collectors on which the project hinges.

"If we can't go through with every part of the project then I think the decision would be to cancel it," said Mallard in a Wednesday interview.

At the moment, project employees are working in Mallard's West Saanich road home basement on demonstration models but should start as soon as possible on the working units to complete them by the project's Sept. 15 deadline. One windmill is to have a 2,500-watt capacity and initially will be erected at Mallard's house and monitored there for several months before moving elsewhere for tests. A smaller 500-watt unit will be entirely portable for demonstrations showing how wind energy can charge batteries to supply power directly to households. He described the two solar collection units as about 10 feet high and portable for use throughout the area.

Mallard said he wouldn't have accepted the money (he claims it was unsolicited and based on an earlier rejected project by the federal labor department) from the federal agency had he thought he would not have been able to secure sufficient additional funds elsewhere to finish the job.

The B.C. Energy Commission has over $2 million for an energy conservation program but the best Mallard could do was a possibility of about $1,000 available at an unspecified future date. The provincial environment department, according to him, is not in a position to handle a request for a grant needed this summer. A campaign aimed at businesses and local individuals in the area has produced nothing.

He defends his project's worth on a number of points.

"It is most important that this nation and the world in certain areas move into renewable resource systems," he said.

Victoria's abundant sun and windy conditions make it ideal for either wind or solar collecting energy systems. None of the proposed working units in the project is unique. Mallard describes them as "based on a number of exploratory projects being carried out in a number of locations."

Mallard also looks upon the project as having entreprenurial worth for a future company to make components and instal renewable energy systems.

"If there are sufficient people interested, and we must generate that interest, we would obviously form a company and go after it in a business fashion," said Mallard.

'Enemy' beats battery

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

Col. A.E. Sherwin headed along the waterfront to see if the enemy forces had arrived.

They had. The battle was lost.

"I thought I'd have a look on my way to work Tuesday," Sherwin said Wednesday. "They had already knocked most of it down."

The "it" in this case was the Second World War gun emplacement at the end of the Ogden Point pier. Col. Sherwin and two other retired old soldiers—G. C. D'Arcy and F.D.H. Nelson—had mounted a pretty impressive battle to preserve it as a historic site.

IT WAS THE wrecking crew that laid the old gun battery low Tuesday and Wednesday, but the real enemy in the eyes of those resisting the attack was federal officialdom.

"The only sort of comment I would want to make is that the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada will be meeting this month, and one would think the government would have been prepared to wait until the board reached a decision—particularly since the board is constituted to advise government," Sherwin said.

The final word in the matter had come from the federal transport department. Earlier, Transport Minister Otto Lang had informed Allan McKinnon (PC—Victoria) that the gun battery was being removed as part of the over-all rebuilding of Ogden Point. A new shipping terminal is to replace warehousing destroyed by fire last August.

All that remains of old soldiers' dream

McKINNON, WHOSE AID was enlisted by the three old soldiers, said last month his mail indicated the public wasn't really interested in saving the structure.

Many were oblivious to the history of the old building. They saw it only as an unsightly structure scarred by time and vandals.

But Sherwin, D'Arcy and Nelson said it was of considerable historic value. They said it was one of a kind—the last such emplacement built for defence of Juan de Fuca Strait during the Second World War. They also argued that it was included in places of national historic importance named for preservation in 1958 by the sites and monuments board. But others oppose this view, saying the declaration applied only to Fort Rodd Hill because of its suitability as a park. Fort Rodd Hill, incidentally, came about chiefly through an earlier campaign by the same three men.

THE THREE WENT into their latest battle well prepared. Their argument and their documents managed to stall original plans to destroy the gun battery.

But in recent days, through discussions with Ottawa officials, they became aware that the battle was all but lost.

The final taste of defeat came this week.

Liquor-shift speeded as hotels lose beer

All but three or four Victoria hotels will be out of beer by the end of the week, B.C. Hotel Association officials predicted Wednesday night.

However, with the brewery industry lockout completing its first week, there was one note of optimism: the provincial government appeared to be making good on its promise to try to speed up licensing procedure for beer parlors wanting to switch to pub classification and sell liquor.

Sources said they understood 62 of the quick liquor licences were approved by Tuesday night. At least one Victoria hotel—the Tally-Ho—had its approval by Wednesday and had made the necessary changes to limit seating in the pub to 125.

"We're lucky," an employee said. "We were just about running out of beer."

The move, on a province-wide basis, will at least have a minor effect on the mushrooming layoffs in the hotel industry.

By Wednesday union officials said more than 4,000 hotel employees across the province had been idled or forced onto short work days by the dispute.

Their number has been added to the 1,200 members of the Canadian Brewery Workers Union left without work by lockouts at Labatt's, Molson's and Columbia breweries, and the three-week-old strike by the same union against Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver.

Caught in the lockout are Labatt employees in Victoria and Vancouver, Molson employees in Vancouver, and Columbia workers at Creston.

Talks broke off last Friday and weren't expected to resume for at least a week. At that time a number of brewery union officials left for a union convention in Toronto, where financial support was pledged Wednesday to those involved in the dispute. This is also expected to affect members of the same union idled by lockout and strike action in Manitoba and Alberta. The same breweries are involved in those disputes.

The union has refused to negotiate with a new association representing the various brewery companies. It has insisted on meeting the breweries on an individual basis.

Several hotels in Greater Victoria have already run out of beer. Among the latest casualties Wednesday night was the beer parlor at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

"We're just about out now . . . we'll be closing before the night is through," an employee said.

The smiles of B.C. super $2.5 million

Canadian Press

Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy has replaced her Smile campaign with a Super Smile campaign.

The minister said Wednesday that 100,000 lapel buttons will be distributed with the motto British Columbia has a super smile for you. The campaign will cost $2.5 million, she said.

Mrs. McCarthy said the Smile campaign was so successful last year that it is being imitated elsewhere.

Saanich seeks revenue

Dog licence crackdown

A crackdown against dog owners who fail to buy licences for their pets will be instituted by Saanich if council acts on a recommendation of its finance committee.

The move stems from criticism by Ald. Ian Cass that present licensing enforcement is inadequate.

"The number of dogs licensed bears no relationship to the number of dogs in the community," he complained during discussion Tuesday.

The amount budgeted for dog licence revenue this year ($20,500) anticipates only 3,700 licences being sold, he said.

"This appears to mean only about 10 per cent of our population have dogs and we all know that's nonsense."

Cass said it was obvious the municipality was not selling anything like the number of licences it should.

Increasing the present fee schedule—$5 for a male or spayed female, $15 for an unspayed female—would be hitting those citizens who now buy licences, he suggested.

Controller-treasurer Roy Broughton said that in 1969 the revenue from dog licences and pound fees defrayed 80 per cent of the pound's operating costs, but this year will account for only 48 per cent.

Students have been employed for the past two summers selling licences on a door-to-door basis in Saanich on a 35 per cent commission basis, Broughton said. Ten students will embark on this year's program next week.

Ald. John Mika said summer was not the best time to conduct such a canvass because many people are away.

He suggested a campaign in the fall, that local dog clubs be invited to undertake the task as a money-raising venture, and the standard fee be tripled for for chronic offenders collecting an unlicensed dog from the pound.

The committee voted to refer the entire question of licence fees to the intermunicipal committee and asked staff to investigate Mika's proposals and prepare a report for council.

B.C. probing schooner fate

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf said Wednesday he was attempting to contact authorities in Panama through the external affairs department to obtain more details on the grounding of the 100-foot schooner Freelance.

The gaff-rigged schooner was to be the government's legacy to the province in commemoration of the Captain Cook bicentennial.

Officials said earlier the schooner had run aground in the San Blas Islands east of the Panama Canal. Extent of the damage was not known.

Bawlf said the ship, purchased for $125,000 last week, was not technically the property of the province yet, and wouldn't become so until it reached B.C.

He said the Quest Star Society of Victoria, which was going to operate the vessel as a youth training ship, is the legal owner. The Freelance is fully insured, the minister said.

Dr. Phillip Ney of the society and Victoria marine surveyor Richard Meadows left here Wednesday for Panama to assess the damage.

Built in Scotland in 1907, the 81-ton Freelance was scheduled to arrive here in early July from Antigua in the West Indies.

On board as crew were Capt. Creston Ketcham of Nanaimo, who holds an unlimited home trade master's certificate, Ralph Higgins of Vitoria, a yachtsman with trans-Pacific experience, Robert Herschfield, a mechanical engineer who helped bring the Quest Star Society's Robertson II through the Panama four years ago, Gerald Main of Victoria as business manager, Graeme and Verna Isbister and Michael Ker of Victoria as crew.

Jetfoil runs a full month

Canadian Press

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday Boeing had agreed to extend its trial jetfoil service between here and Seattle this summer to one month from two weeks.

The jetfoil, which begins the service July 22, carries 245 passengers and completes the run in one hour and 40 minutes.

Empty classrooms finding takers

Ministry hunting space

The education ministry is among those interested in using vacant school buildings in the Greater Victoria school district, school board chairman Susan Brice said Wednesday.

As mentioned in a report of the school board's process committee, the committee guiding board deliberations on school closures, Mrs. Brice and school board vice-chairman Peter Dorazio met with the ministry "to discuss both capital programs for the Greater Victoria school district and the utilization of school space and its relationship to the space needs of the ministry," Mrs. Brice confirmed.

The meeting was "not particularly productive," she said, and the discussion was confined to generalities.

"The ministry is itself interested in additional space, possibly to replace space now used in St. Anne's Academy," Mrs. Brice said. "They have indicated to us that they would like to be kept in mind."

Ministry officials also indicated that they would look favorably on requests from the district for capital funds to convert the district's vacant supply centre into administrative offices if the board were to make its present administrative headquarters on Foul Bay Road available to Camosun College.

The college has asked the board for the buildings, which could help the college out of a severe space shortage during a major building program scheduled to begin this winter at the adjacent Lansdowne campus. The college also has long-range plans for the 40,000 square feet in the school board administrative offices, comprised of the Paul Building and the district media centre, and if they are not available, the necessary space will have to built elsewhere on the college campus.

School trustees voted Monday to reverse a recommendation from a special committee examining the future of the buildings. That committee, headed by trustee Mary Breer, said the school board should advertise the space on the open market, rather than give Camosun College first option on the space.

But trustee Dorazio, also a Camosun College council member, said the school board has an obligation to the college, and argued that a slightly better price from a commercial client for lease of the board's administrative centre would not be in the best interests of taxpayers if the college were forced to construct new space to make up for the loss of the Paul Building and media centre.

The Greater Victoria school board could not have obtained the Paul Building if its former owner, the University of Victoria, had viewed it as a purely commercial transaction, Dorazio noted.

The board, including Mrs. Breer, voted to enter into negotiations with Camosun College for use of the Paul Building and media centre.

Strap issue filed, forgotten

A suggestion that use of the strap be considered in schools has simply been received and filed by the Greater Victoria school board, school board chairman Susan Brice said Wednesday.

The suggestion that it would be considered if a board were to request it was made by Education Minister Pat McGeer in a letter to the school board.

The school board had discussed the matter in camera but trustee John Young had released McGeer's letter as a protest against the board's conducting business in closed meetings which Young felt should be public.

Since the meeting was in camera, Mrs. Brice said she could not comment on the discussion that took place at the meeting, other than to say trustees have no interest in asking permission to use the strap.

McGeer confirmed in an interview Tuesday that he would indeed consider use of the strap in schools, but only if support for the idea came from teachers and principals as well as school trustees.

A policy to use corporal punishment would have little success unless those expected to apply it supported it, McGeer said.

Traffic tickets beat record

Judge William Ostler is expected to receive a record stack of 165 traffic tickets in Victoria provincial court today—all for one person who is the president of two holding companies.

The tickets, issued between April, 1977 and April, 1978, belong to the two companies and court staff have calculated that if the minimum fines were levied in each case, the total would be $1,340.

An informed source said that two cars and a motorcycle were involved in the offences and that Victoria police had to tow away one of the vehicles Friday to serve summonses on the person.

The offences include:

- 61 parking meter violations.
- 56 general loading zone violations.
- 14 truck loading zone violations.
- Eight parking on sidewalk violations.
- Six passenger zone violations.
- Six yellow line violations.
- Six no parking zone violations.
- Six parking more than 12 inches from curb violations.
- Two hooded meter violations.
- One left wheels to curb violation.
- One bus zone violation.
- One obstructing driveway violation.
- One occupying two meter spaces violation.

May entries closed, draws soon

Entries for King Fisherman fish caught in May are now closed and the hidden weight draws will be made in a few days.

Prize and crest winners, along with the Molson Fish of the Month winners will be announced in the Colonist June 25.

If any late May entries are received from now on, they will be included in the draw for June prizes. Meanwhile anglers are now fishing for another round of prizes, crests and Fish of the Month awards.

This Sunday, Dad will have his day

By BETTI LOGAN

Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

Sunday is Father's Day. It's a day to acknowledge the patience, understanding, generosity, wit and hard work millions of fathers have demonstrated all year long.

No gift or amount of money, of course, will be sufficient to express true feelings about dad, but families try hard anyway. Countless numbers of hours will be spent in stores shopping for just the right something to show dad they care.

According to a study by the Harvard Business School, more than $1.5 billion will be spent for Father's Day gifts this year in the United States. Despite valiant attempts of ingenuity, the report states, three out of four shoppers will wind up buying something to wear.

When Mrs. John Bruce Dodd came up with the idea of honoring father in 1909, she had no dream it would become a day of international significance. She merely wanted to express her thanks to her father, William Jackson Smart, for his role as both parents in raising six children with "courage and selflessness" until they were grown. (Her mother died when she was 16).

She once wrote, "he was a 'golden-rule' father, and he tried to imbue us with the qualities of honesty and fairness to others . . . A father should have gifts because he is the great gift-giver." In 1972, the third Sunday in June was officially designated Father's Day by President Nixon. It is also celebrated in 37 other countries, including Canada.

History tells us that to be king for a day shouldn't be taken lightly by fathers. In countries like the Palau Island in the South Seas, the ruling matriarchs traditionally could have any male executed if he disturbed their contemplation. In India, if father went into debt, mother could sell him into slavery to pay off creditors. And, in Yugoslavia, Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins said, Father's Day falls on Dec. 3. The children would plot to catch him, tie him to a piece of furniture and he'd have to buy himself out of bondage with promises of substantial Christmas gifts.

For North American kids it's a lot easier to honor dad. But what to get him? There often aren't any affordable gifts that are good enough. For most fathers, it's the thought that counts. So here are some thoughts:

—An old-fashioned, made-from-scratch, strawberry shortcake (or his favorite dessert) might be a pleasant surprise.

—How about buying an extension for the telephone that runs from the bedroom to the workshop or the new model that automatically dials the numbers most often called?

—If dad is a card player, you can really floor him by arranging a stag poker party, complete with beer, snacks and a $25 stake to play with.

—Other suggestions — a good book, a pair of tickets to a favorite sporting event.

—Or, if you have the time, use it to turn one of his favorit ties or shirts into something personal through needlework. You can do the same with his desk accessories — blotters, memo pads and pen holders — in less than four hours, the experts say. (Or if dad is one of the growing number of men who like to create their own needlework, you can offer him a gift certificate from a department store for a lesson).

Or you can always give him some free advice from an expert. Jerry Cammarata, author of The Fun Book of Fatherhood," says any man who wants to be a "super pop" should realize it's not that hard.

City pitcher agrees to terms with Mussels

By TOM KEYSER

Among the still nameless faces from Ohio and California cavorting at Royal Athletic Park these days a local light shines.

Victoria Mussels, preparing for their opener in the Class-A Northwest League June 20, have agreed to sign Roy Moretti, pitcher for Greaves Movers of the Victoria Senior Amateur League.

Moretti, 21, is a righthander born and raised in Victoria. He'll likely fit into the Mussels' plans as a long reliever.

And, according to manager Jim Chapman, the signing isn't a ploy to lure fans into the park. He says Moretti has a real chance.

"He looks good," says Chapman, himself a Victoria native. "He has a few problems with his delivery but it's just because he hasn't had the right coaching. With a few tips, I think he'll help us."

Moretti hadn't signed late Wednesday but will in the next few days. Chapman says "it's official"; Moretti can bid farewell to Greaves Movers.

"I'm really looking forward to playing with the Mussels," Moretti said Wednesday. "I've always wanted a chance to play pro ball but you don't get those kind of chances very often in this part of the country

"I did try out for Cincinnati and Montreal when they had local camps here. They seemed interested but nothing came of it."

"Now all I'm worried about is getting a leave of absence from my job with the city."

The 5-foot-10, 163-pound pitcher includes a fastball, curve and change-up in his repertoire. He was the only local player invited to try out for the team.

Chapman says he's "pretty well down to where we want to be," as far as personnel is concerned.

About 24 players remain in camp and the Mussels figure to open the season with 21. Workouts continue twice daily until the lidlifter.

SHORT HOPS — The Mussels and Labatt's are discussing an arrangement for promotion and financial assistance between the brewery and the baseball club.

A spokesman for the brewery said talks are continuing but that nothing concrete has been agreed upon...Chapman and pitching-coach Don Rogelstad have decided on an early-season pitching rotation. Rogelstad will start the opener in Bellingham and lefthander Dave Cheadle, the staff's most experienced pitcher, opens before hometown fans when the Mariners visit the next day. Frank Lucarelli is pencilled in for the third game here June 22 and Bob Watkins, 21, pitches the next night in Bellingham.

Watkins, from San Diego and released from the Montreal Expos system this spring, is a recent arrival who pitched in the New York-Pennsylvania League (Class-A) last season...Another newcomer is Chad Corcoran, outfielder who stole 26 bases while hitting .274 for Portland in the Northwest League last year...Moretti's father, Ray, played for the old Victoria Tyees of the Western International League, back in the 1950's.

Barons, Stars amalgamate

MONTREAL (CP) —John Ziegler, president of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday that Cleveland Barons and Minnesota North Stars have merged and will operate as Minnesota North Stars next season.

Ziegler said that the new North Stars would play in the Adams Division replacing Cleveland.

The new North Stars will be able to protect 10 players and two goaltenders from the combined present rosters of the two teams.

Washington Capitals and St. Louis Blues will be able to draft one player apiece in the special draft today and then the North Stars will be able to increase their protective list by one player.

Vancouver Canucks and Pittsburgh Penguins will each be able to draft one player after that and once that is completed the new Minnesota team will be able to protect one additional player.

Colorado Rockies will then be able to draft a player and once that is completed the remaining players will be the responsibility of the new club.

"The new North Stars will get $30,000 from each club drafting," Ziegler said.

Cleveland's draft choices in the amateur draft today will be cancelled except for their second-round pick which was already traded to Washington.

Gordon Ritz, president of the North Stars, said the deal is like a marriage—"both have to agree to get together."

Gordon Gund, speaking on behalf of the Barons and his brother George Gund III, chairman of the board, said he and his brother had made the initial approach in the unusual transaction.

When asked why Minnesota was chosen, he said the area is a good region where a strong combination should go over well.

Zeigler denied there was any precedent being set by the merger teams.

Management from the Barons and the North Stars will continue to consult with each other for the time being in operating the new North Stars.

A decision on who will coach the team hasn't been made. Jack Evans coached the Barons last season while the North Stars had been looking for a coach when the deal was arranged.

Asked why Washington, St. Louis, Vancouver and Pittsburth are being allowed to draft in today's dispersal session, Zeigler said prime consideration was given to teams which didn't make the playoffs last season.

No consideration is being given to the addition of another team this year, he added, meaning the NHL will operate with 17 clubs.

Lou Nanne, who finished the season as coach and general manager of the North Stars, said his position hasn't changed as far he knows.

When asked who would direct the North Stars activities in today's amateur draft, George Gund replied that would be settled between Nanne and Harry Howell, the general manager of the Barons.

Gund said he regretted there won't be an NHL team in Cleveland next season, but that a recent market survey showed it was unfeasible to continue operating in the Ohio city.

The Barons lost almost $3 million during the 1977-78 season after suffering heavy losses the previous off-season in moving to Cleveland from Oakland, Calif., where they had played as Oakland Seals since the NHL's first expansion in 1967.

The Gund group bought the Barons from Mel Swig, a San Francisco hotel owner, last summer amid speculation the club was about to fold. In fact, there have been reports almost every season since the Seals joined the league that the team would either move or fold.

Flyers deal with Penguins

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers traded three players to Pittsburgh Penguins late Wednesday night in exchange for Pittsburgh's first choice in today's National Hockey League amateur draft.

Sent to Pittsburgh were defenceman Tom Bladon along with forwards Ross Lonsberry and Orest Kindrachuk.

In addition to the first round draft pick, the Flyers will receive future considerations.

Bladon appeared in 79 games with the Flyers this year, scoring 11 goals with 24 assists for 35 points.

Lonsberry had 18 goals and 30 assists in 78 games, while Kindrachuk, a strong defensive forward, had 17 goals and 45 assists in 73.

Earlier in the evening, goaltender Paul Harrison was traded to Toronto Maple Leafs by Minnesota North Stars in exchange for a fourth-round draft pick and future considerations.

Harrison appeared in 27 games with North Stars last season, allowing 99 goals for a 3.82 goals-against average.

Next game: Tonight — Nanaimo at New Westminster.

By REG REYNOLDS

Victoria Shamrocks were only in command for half the game Wednesday night but that proved to be more than enough time.

The Western Lacrosse Association leaders made up for a slow start by pumping in 10 straight goals on the way to pounding New Westminster Salmonbellies 18-11 before a crowd of about 1,000 at Memorial Arena.

The goaltending of Ted Gernaey and the erratic shooting of the Shamrocks enabled New Westminster to pull to a 9-7 lead by the 13 minute mark of the second period.

But, helped by a pair of power-play opportunities, the slow starting Shamrocks finally shifted into their running game and scored the final four goals of the second period. They maintained their momentum through the intermission and scored the first six goals of the third period to make it 17-9 by the 11:36 mark.

Three of the goals were power-play scores by Ron MacNeil, Charn Dhillon and Danny Green and one was a short-handed shot by Art Webster.

Ironically the only goals the Salmonbellies scored in the final period came with big New Westminster rookie Mario Govorchin in the penalty box serving a five-minute major for severly cross-checking MacNeil, the league-leading scorer.

Green was the best of the Shamrocks with three goals and three assists, Gord Lyons, who scored goals nine seconds apart in the first period, had three goals, Norm Baker and MacNeil scored three times each and Ranjit Dillon, Charn Dhillon, Jerry Kustaski, Chris Hall Wesbster and Jeevan Dillon scored once each. Hall and Dhillon also had four assists each.

Wayne Goss scored three times and assisted four times for New Westminster and Bruce Turris and Brian Tasker scored twice each. Bob Tasker, Norm Leuszler, Ken Brown and Bill Mosdell scored once each.

Gerneay made 34 saves but after giving up eight of the goals in the Shamrocks streak he was pulled in favor of Jim Greenwell who stopped seven shots and was beaten twice.

Scott Marshall went all the way for Victoria and made 38 saves.

New Westminster plays host to Nanaimo Timbermen tonight and the winner travels with Victoria to the Commonwealth Games Aug. 9-10 at Edmonton.

Fox sparkles

Ken Fox gave up two hits pitching Wednesday night but got them back at the plate, leading Victoria Athletics to a 6-0 victory over Elks in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball at Central Park.

Striking out 13 while walking only one batter, Fox doubled, singled and walked to score three runs. He also drove in a run.

Don Sutton knocked in two for the winners with a single in the sixth inning.

Meanwhile, at Heywood Avenue Park, another batch of Victoria Athletics had equal success.

Dan Wickens, Dave Scott and Mike McPherson each homered in the third inning and Larry McKinnon tossed a seven-hitter as Victoria dumped Webb and Trace 6-2.

Dave Falconer homered for the losers.

In senior women's action at Hyacinth Park, MacDonald's Furniture pounded Hygrade Radio 12-5 while Vicettes slipped by Butler Bros. 6-5.

Marg Barber slammed four hits for MacDonalds and Kathy Bemister had three. Diana Fuhrer doubled and singled for Hygrade.

A sacrifice fly by Heather Knight in the seventh inning gave Vicettes their win over Butler Bros.

Oriole streak now 13

Jim Palmer allowed only the second earned run in his last 59 1-3 innings while pitching a 5-2 victory over California Angels to extend Baltimore Orioles' winning streak to 13 in a row.

A misplayed ball in the seventh inning by centre fielder Carlos Lopez, who drove in two Baltimore runs, ruined Palmer's bid for his sixth shutout of the American League baseball season and the 51st of his career.

With two out, Lopez hesitated before charging a soft liner by Lyman Bostock and then failed to make a shoestring catch. One run scored on the hit and another on the ensuing error by Lopez.

A bases-loaded single by Lopez capped a three-run rally by the Orioles in the third. They scored two more in the fourth, one on a homer by Billy Smith to chase Ken Brett.

In other American League action, Luis Tiant posted his 45th career shutout with a four-hitter as Boston Red Sox breezed to a 9-0 victory over Oakland A's.

Paul Blair's three-run homer with two out in the 10th inning capped a four-run rally and gave New York Yankees a wild 11-9 come-from-behind victory over Seattle Mariners.

In the National League, Vida Blue allowed five hits over 8 1-3 innings and reliever Randy Moffitt struck out Philadelphia sluggers Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski to end the game, giving San Francisco Giants a 2-1 victory over the Phillies.

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer and reliever Ed Whitson picked up his first victory of the season as Pittsburgh Pirates rallied from a four-run deficit to clip Houston Astros 6-4. Jeff Burroughs and Dale Murphy belted home runs as Atlanta Braves whipped St. Louis Cardinals 7-1.

Black Gold tops 'Caps

EDMONTON (CP) —Striker Ted MacDougall lobbed a 20-yard shot over Vancouver Whitecaps' goalie Steve Humphreys at 65 minutes Wednesday night to give Edmonton Black Gold a 3-2 exhibition soccer victory.

The injury-riddled Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League got a goal from Buzz Parsons in the 38th minute on a header off of Bobby Lenarduzzi's free kick.

They tied it 2-2 in the second as Black Gold tender Melija Aleksic bobbed Dale Mitchell's cross and Drew Ferguson jumped on the loose ball for an easy goal.

Gregg quits

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Forrest Gregg has resigned as offensive line coach of San Diego Chargers after 3½ months on the job, the National Football League team announced Wednesday.

Semi-finalists set

Defending champion and medalist Dorothy De Girolamo faces Jill Johnson and Heather Stewart takes on Pat Derry today in the semi-finals of the Victoria and district women's golf championships at Gorge Vale.

De Girolamo, playing on her home course, defeated Juanita Turner, also of Gorge Vale, 6 and 5 in Wednesday's quarter-final championship medal round.

Meanwhile, Saltspring Island's Johnson downed Elsie Saunders of Gorge Vale 5 and 4. Stewart, from Uplands, overcame Myra McLean of Royal Colwood 6 and 5 while Derry, also of Royal Colwood, clipped Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale 2 and 1.

The finals are set for Friday, starting at 9:45 a.m.

Bombers top 'Riders

Winnipeg Blue Bombers won a battle of quarterbacks Wednesday night and rolled to a 23-14 Canadian Football League exhibition victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders before a preseason record crowd of 22,527 in Winnipeg.

Both teams took long looks at their backup quarterbacks, and the Bombers came out ahead with Harry Knight and University of Manitoba graduate Bud Harden throwing touchdown strikes to complement one in the fourth quarter by veteran Ralph Brock.

Saskatchewan also made use of newcomers Ken Washington and Larry Dick to back up Ron Lancaster. Their efforts were less spectacular, although Washington completed a 62-yard drive with a four-yard touchdown plunge early in the fourth quarter.

Archie Gray, Mark McDonald and Mike Holmes scored Winnipeg touchdowns and Harold Woods scored the other Saskatchewan touchdown on a 100-yard kickoff return.

In the East, Ottawa Rough Riders rallied for a 24-16 win over Hamilton Tiger-Cats before 21,414 fans in Hamilton.

Tiger-Cat running back Jimmy Edwards was helped from the field with an injured ankle in the first half and didn't see further action.

Programs cancelled

Response to closed-circuit television broadcasts of World Cup soccer games here has been so poor, organizers have cancelled all but the showing of the final on Sunday, June 25.

John Pickburn of Vancouver said Wednesday night there were virtually no tickets sold in advance for doubleheaders Sunday and next Wednesday.

Broadcasts of first-round games last Saturday and Sunday drew about 450 fans in total to Memorial Arena, well below expectations of the promoters.

"We will honor any tickets sold for the 18th and 21st of June by exchanging them for a ticket to the final," Pickburn said.

Tickets (at $15) for the final are on sale at Memorial Arena.

Dutch strike for five as shooters erupt

BUENOS AIRES (CP) — The Netherlands, Brazil and Argentina scored dramatic victories Wednesday to launch the second round of the World Cup soccer finals with a barrage of goals.

The Dutch were the day's top scorers, crushing Austria 5-1. But Brazil, 3-0 winners over Peru, and Argentina, 2-0 conquerors of Poland, underlined the strength of the South American challenge.

Defending champion West Germany was lucky to achieve a scoreless draw against Italy in the day's other match. It was the third 0-0 draw for West Germany in the tournament.

Mario Kempes was the Argentine hero, scoring two goals to beat Poland in a bruising battle.

Kempes headed in Daniel Bertonis cross in the 15th minute and scored his second with a fierce ground shot in the 71st minute after Osvaldo Ardiles had riddled the Polish defence with a fine solo run.

The Dutch lead Group A, followed by West Germany and Italy with one point apiece, and Austria. Brazil leads Group B on goal difference over Argentina with Poland and Peru third and fourth respectively.

Action resumes Sunday with Italy against Austria, West Germany playing the Netherlands, Argentina meeting Brazil and Peru playing Poland.

Brazil, playing precise but unspectacular soccer, went into an early two-goal lead on long-range shots by Dirceu.

Dirceu's opening goal came on a tricky, curving free kick from 30 yards that had goalkeeper Ramon Quiroga grabbing at air as it rocketed into the corner of the net. Dirceu then beat Quiroga again with a low, bouncing shot that the goalkeeper flubbed.

Brazil's third goal came on a penalty kick in the 71st minute by Zico, who had come on a minute earlier as a substitute for Gil.

Both teams threw some heavy tackles and two players—Jose Velasquez of Peru and Brazil's Roberto—were booked by Romanian referee Nicolae Rainea.

Johnny Rep scored two goals and Rob Rensenbrink got his fifth of the tournament as the Dutch went into the early lead in Group A.

The orange-shirted Dutchmen, runners-up to West Germany in the 1974 World Cup, were unstoppable against Austria at Cordoba. The Dutch were a little disappointing in their first-round games at Mendoza but have said all along the faster field at Cordoba would suit their style, and they proved it.

Erny Brandts, drafted into a Dutch team apparently weakened by injuries to key players, started the scoring spree with a magnificent header in the sixth minute.

The Dutch stormed the Austrian goal but could not score again until the 35th minute, when Rensenbrink made it 2-0 from a penalty. Rep scored the third one minute later, and the Dutch had the match wrapped up with a 3-0 lead by halftime.

Rep scored again in the 53th minute. Erich Obermayer pulled one back for Austria with 10 minutes to go, but two minutes later the Dutch stormed back with a goal by Willy Van der Kerkhof.

Italy outplayed West Germany in midfield but failed to get a goal. Sepp Maier, 34-year-old German goalkeeper who is playing in his third World Cup, kept a blank scoresheet for the fourth time in four matches, but luck helped him this time.

Maier scrambled helplessly across his goal as a long looping shot by Antonio Cabrini hit the post in the 55th minute. In the 76th minute he pushed a header by Renato Zaccarelli to one side—and again the post saved him.

Huge place return record for Sandown

By JIM TANG

Some big prices have been posted at Sandown Park in the first seven days of the 57-day harness-racing meet, but Wednesday was the first time that the tote board couldn't handle the situation.

The situation came about in the sixth race when the 37-1 Baron Romero came rushing up in the late going to beat favored Rays Golden Patch to the finish line. When the prices were posted, the board informed that the five-year-old gelding, driven by Marcel Bouvier, had paid $75.40 to win and $14.20 to show. There were no place figures, and the first thought was that no place money had been wagered on the winner.

It wasn't the case at all. The Sandown board can't post three-figure place payoffs, and the 1,089 fans who made up the biggest weekday crowd so far were informed by the announcer that the place payoff was $108.30.

It was the biggest-ever place payoff at Sandown Park for horse-racing of any kind and Jim Keeling, who operates the Orangeville (Ont.), Cloverdale and Sandown Raceways, said he believed it to be the biggest place return in Canadian standard-bred racing.

Baron Romero also set up the biggest Exactor return of the card - $268.30 - although Rays Golden Patch went off as a 6-5 favorite.

Also making news Wednesday was Joe Hudon's five-year-old gelding Lennies Choice and veteran driver Willie Urquhart.

Lennies Choice, a come-from-behind winner in its first three starts, went out with the pacesetters in the fourth race against a bit better company and stayed on the front end to make it four for four at Sandown and seven wins for the year. The winning time was 2:12, one second faster than its previous best.

The win was the sixth of the meeting for Hudon, but he now trails Dave Jungquist and Urquhart, who guided two of his own runners and one he trains for Alberta-owner I. Carlson to victories to make it seven trips to the Sandown winners' circle.

Urquhart brought overlooked Shainey fast in the strtech for a $27.40 return in the second race, kept Irish Stadt on the front end for an $8.70 return in the fifth race, and won the seventh with Deacon Brodie ($10.20).

The seventh-race win put Urquhart ahead but Jungquist scored with Hawthorne Volo in the eighth to post his seventh win.

BREAKAGE: The steady gain continued Wednesday with customers betting $63,123 for the best figures of the five weekday cards. The handle was a gain of more than $6,000 over the first Wednesday...Keith Linton, who so far has driven only two winners at Sandown, added a steady performer to his stable Wednesday when he claimed Jupiter Ric, the nine-year-old horse which won the third race, for $1,500...another 800 tons of crushed limestone will be spread on the track today. The effects of the first 800 tons were evident Wednesday in improved times. Deacon Brodie won the seventh in 2:08 2/5, Hawthorne Volo paced the eighth-race mile in 2:08 3/5 and Senga Lennoc was clocked at 2:09 in the ninth...there are 10 races on the Friday card, and first post time is 5:35...

McLean returns as BCJHL head

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ernie McLean has agreed to serve as chairman of the board of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League for another season, says league vice-chairman Ron Livingstone of Langley.

Livingstone says that McLean, coach of Memorial Cup champion New Westminster Bruins of the Western Canada Hockey League, is needed because "Tier Two hockey is going through troubled times and it's important to have somebody like Ernie, who was numerous contacts and experience, heading the league."

New Westminster had two farm clubs in the BCJHL last season—Revelstoke Bruins and Abbotsford Flyers—but controlling interest in the Abbotsford franchise has been sold to businessman Ernie Unger of the Fraser Valley city.

The vice-chairman also said that Bellingham Blazers would remain in the league despite a recent decision by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which banned Bellingham from competing in the Centennial Cup playoffs.

Livingston also said that two BCJHL teams—Vernon and Langley—had been renamed the Canadians for next season. They previously were Vernon Vikings and Langley Lords.

He said both teams had purchased new uniforms before finding out the other also had changed its name.

CHL moving offices

DALLAS (AP) — Bud Polle, president of th Central Hockey League, announced Wednesday the league offices will be moved from Phoenix, Ariz., to Dallas.

Polle also said the league has approved a schedule in which each of the six clubs will play 76 games.

The new CHL entry, Oklahoma City, will be named the Stars and will get its players from Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League.

Tardy tackle reports to Argos

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Mike Wilson, the six-foot-five, 285-pound offensive tackle who wanted out of his Canadian Football League contract so he could join Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League, reported to the Toronto Argonauts training camp late Tuesday night.

"I'm here to play and I intend to play the best I can," Wilson said. "I'm under contract and I intend to honor it."

The former University of Georgia all-America has two years remaining on a three-year contract but hasn't abandoned hopes of ultimately going to the NFL.

"I wouldn't be hurting anyone but myself if I played less than 100 per cent," Wilson said. "I'll play until my contract is up here and then I'll see if there's still a spot for me in the NFL."

Dick Shatto, Argos general manager, had said Wilson would be fined for every practice he missed and presumably will dock him for being absent from Tuesday's workouts.

Wilson had been given until last Wednesday to report but the deadline was extended to Monday after he underwent a sinus operation in his hometown of Gainesville, Ga. He will be on the suspended list until the team feels he is ready to play.

Meanwhile, the other half of the Georgia Connection, guard Joel Parrish, strained tendons in his ankle and will be sidelined for several days, missing Toronto's opening exhibition game in Edmonton Saturday night.

CIL EXTERIOR LATEX

It stretches so it won't crack, blister or peel.

It takes a tough exterior paint to stand up over the years and keep on looking good. On sale right now are two paints that can do just that.

CIL Acrylic Latex Lo-Sheen. And CIL Acrylic Latex Gloss.

Like an umbrella that is open, both paints stretch as the wood in your house does to absorb moisture in the winter. Like an umbrella that's closed, both paints shrink as your house does when it dries in the summer.

The results are exterior paints that resist cracking, blistering and peeling.

The results are tough exterior paints with a beautiful future.

CIL ACRYLIC LATEX LO-SHEEN. For siding, brick and masonry.

AND CIL ACRYLIC LATEX GLOSS. For doors, windows, trim and siding.

Boe faces ultimatum

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The National Basketball Association postponed action Wednesday on the proposed shift of its Buffalo franchise for up to 20 days and gave Roy Boe, owner of New Jersey Nets, until July 28 to get his financial house in order or face the loss of his franchise.

The deadline imposed on Boe, who is heavily in debt from both the Nets and hockey's New York Islanders, falls 10 days after a similar deadline set earlier this week by the National Hockey League.

The NBA board of governors, at the first session of its summer meetings which were scheduled to run through Friday, passed a resolution stating that in view of "the financial condition of the New Jersey Nets, the application of the Nets for permission to play at the Rutgers Arena for the 1978-79 season is tabled until July 28, 1978."

The board also empowered commissioner Larry O'Brien "to send such notices and to take such other action as appears necessary or desirable . . . to protect all of the rights and interests of the NBA and its member teams, including the termination of the New Jersey Nets franchise."

Brown met for two hours Wednesday morning with the league's advisory and expansion committees. When it was over, he read a one paragraph statement: "Because of the many complexities involved in the movement of a franchise, including such questions as arena availability, scheduling and realignment of divisions that might be occasioned by a transfer, it was decided that the request by Buffalo would be the subject of a special meeting of the Board to be convened within the next 20 days."

Once again Brown refused to name his first choice for relocation of the franchise.

"We are totally prepared for several markets," he said. "Each has several problems. With Dallas, for example, we have the problems of playing in a temporary arena for two years."

Brown did say, however, that he expected the league's Board of Governors to approve his recommendation of a new site.

"I don't expect a great deal of debate on the movement of the franchise from Buffalo," he said. "I think they know that we have done a great deal of research on all the possible markets. I hope they would accept our recommendations. I would think so, because we have tried to act responsibly in this matter."

Sport digest

Nordiques sign Demers as coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jacques Demers signed a two-year contract Wednesday to succed Marc Boileau as coach of Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association.

Demers, who coached Indianapolis Racers to a WHA Eastern Division championship two years ago, resigned as coach of Cincinnati Stingers a week ago.

Demers had been offered posts as coach and director of player personnel with the Stingers but rejected both because he felt the franchise was financially unsound.

At Quebec, Demers will have two of the league's top scorers in Real Cloutier and Marc Tardif and veteran defensive player Jean-Claude Tremblay.

Demers had indicated he would be interested in returning as coach of the Racers but he said he was never called by the Racers' principal owner, Nelson Skalbania. Skalbania said he expects to name a successor to Bill Goldsworthy this week.

Kings sign Heaslip

MONTREAL (CP) — Forward Mark Heaslip was signed to a multi-year contract by Los Angeles Kings, the National Hockey League club announced Wednesday.

Heaslip, who became a free agent June 1, divided his time last season with the NHL's New York Rangers and New Haven Nighthawks of the American Hockey League.

No compensation will be required.

Oh sets RBI record

TOKYO (AP) — Sadaharu Oh set a Japan record of 1,949 runs batted in with a two-run home run Wednesday as his Yomiuri Giants lost to Hanshin Tigers 7-6 in the opener of a doubleheader.

Oh's homer was his 20th of the season and 786th of his career. He surpassed Hank Aaron's lifetime mark of 755 last year.

Teammate Isao Harimoto also set a Japanese record of 2,828 hits with a single in the ninth inning of the first game. Both the hit and RBI records had been held by Katsuya Nomura of the Lotte Orions.

Relievers traded

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians announced Wednesday they have traded rookie reliever Dennis Kinney to San Diego Padres for veteran reliever Dan Spillner.

Spillner, 27, appeared in 76 games for the Padres last season, more than any other National League baseball pitcher with the exception of team-mate Rollie Fingers. The right-hander was 7-6, with six saves and a 3.73 earned-run average last year, but was 1-0 with no saves and a 4.86 ERA in 17 appearances this season.

Kinney, 26, appeared in 18 games for the Indians, compiling a 0-2 record and a 4.42 ERA. The left-hander had five saves for the Indians.

Connors back in shape

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Americans Jimmy Connors and Roscoe Tanner both scored easy victories in a $125,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament Wednesday.

Connors, the top seed, cruised into the quarter-finals with a 6-2, 6-2 win over Australian Dave Carter, while Tanner beat New Zealand's Brian Fairlie 6-3, 6-2 in a second-round match.

"I'm not making any Wimbledon predictions, but I certainly have a chance now," Tanner said. "I served well and returned particularly well. Considering it is my first week on grass, I'm very pleased."

Fairlie, who eliminated Arthur Ashe of the United States on Tuesday, agreed with his opponent's remarks.

"Roscoe's serve is incredible, it seems to get something off the court."

"There's no doubt now that I will be playing at Wimbledon," Connors said. "I was hitting the ball more solidly than I've ever done."

Connors had been ill with mononucleosis before coming here and had said he was doubtful about playing at Wimbledon.

Twins decide against trade

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Twins announced Wednesday they have ended efforts to trade superstar Rod Carew.

Twins president Calvin Griffith said the decision not to trade Carew was reached after discussions with manager Gene Mauch and other members of his executive staff, and after weighing all factors involved.

Griffith said Carew will remain with the Twins through the rest of the season.

Arnie still hoping

DENVER (AP) — The prospect is for a wide-open, multiple-man scramble with Arnold Palmer—as a sentimental choice—the only clear-cut favorite in the 78th U.S. Open golf championship that begins today.

"Maybe, just maybe ..." Palmer murmured after a practice round over the 7,053-yard, par-71 Cherry Hills Country Club course where so much of his legend was created 18 years ago.

But it was a wistful hope, not a conviction, that he could again achieve the magic that once was Palmer's alone. When the numbers go on the cards for the record, the 48-year-old Palmer will again be an elder statesman of the game.

The chief challengers in the 153-man field arrayed for the American national championships are Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Hubert Green, Hale Irwin, Lee Trevino and Gary Player.

They'll be testing, and tested by a hilly course framed by the majestic backdrop of the Rockies. As usual for an Open course, it has deep, difficult rough and narrow fairways. It's lush and beautiful.

But the greens are slower than normal, the mile-high altitude will be a factor and the pace of play will receive severe scrutiny.

The USGA also warned the players in a written notice that the five-hour rounds common to this championship are "deplorable" and that players lagging behind "will be penalized without warning."

The altitude is such that players get "seven-10 per cent more distance on every shot you hit" Watson said, with the effect "the course is playing very short, maybe 6,500-6,400 yards."

Nicklaus and Watson, who staged those dramatic confrontations at the Masters and British Open last year, can be expected to play key roles in the tournament. But in the days leading up to the start of play, Palmer was the central figure in an outpouring of nostalgia that drew up to 13,000 fans on practice days.

It was on this course in 1960 that, on the final round, he drove the green on the 346-yard first hole, birdied it and went on to a 65 that madeup a seven-shot deficit, won him the title and added the word "charge" to golf's lexicon.

Nicklaus, who, as a 20-year-old amateur finished second to Nicklaus in 1960, also took note of the historic significance of the 1960 tournament.

"Arnold won the Masters that year, but it was here that he really became Arnold Palmer. We all know the impact he had on golf.

"You have to wonder, if I'd beaten him, if someone else had beaten him, if he'd allowed himself to be beaten, what the state of the game today would be."

London considers '88 Games

LONDON (AP) — London may offer to stage the Olympic Games in 1988.

The Greater London council is considering making a feasibility study into staging the games in a specially-built complex in the city's decaying dockland along the River Thames.

"The Olympic Games were held in London in 1908 and again 40 years later," Horace Cutler, the council's chairman, said Wednesday. "It would be appropriate to hold them here once more in 1988, an interval of another 40 years."

The council considered two years ago making a bid for the 1984 Games but dropped the idea because it would cost too much.

Cutler said, however, that current sentiment appeared to be moving away from the lavish grandeur that has caused crippling financial problems for cities that have staged the Olympics in recent years.

He emphasized that the council obviously could not go it alone. "A venue of this nature demands partnership between local authorities, government and private enterprise."

The British Olympics Association already has indicated it is keen to have the Games.

But the Labor government, facing economic problems, has declined comment on the idea.

The International Olympic Committee, which decides where the Games are held, has said it aims for less expensive Games after financial problems in Montreal in 1976.

Montreal originally budgeted $310 million. But the Games eventually cost $1.5 billion, leaving Montreal with a $900-million deficit. Moscow, venue for the 1980 Games, has budgeted $300 million.

Glasgow dropped its idea of bidding for the 1988 Games after it was found it would cost the economically blighted city around $900 million.

Building an Olympic City in London's dockland would provide a big boost to the once-thriving district that now is a wasteland of slums, derelict docks and advanced urban decay.

The council's policy and resources committee is expected to commission a $90,000 study later this month. If that study indicates playing host to the Games is feasible, the council will make a formal bid to the International Olympics Committee in 1982 when the venue for the 1988 Games will be decided.

A time for Action

On Monday, June 12, the Government of Canada made public a major statement of federal government policy on national unity, calling for a fundamental renewal of the Canadian Federation.

A booklet covering highlights of the policy paper, "A Time for Action," is available at the following post offices:

L.A. hopes brighter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This city's hopes of staging the 1984 Olympic Games have brightened with word that a private party is willing to guarantee that the city will not lose any money on them.

Mayor Tom Bradley's committee of business leaders said Tuesday it hopes to reach an agreement within four or five days with a someone from outside California that would relieve the city of financial responsibility if the Games are held here.

Committee members would not identify the party but did say it is not connected with the entertainment industry, the oil business or a foreign government.

The prospective guarantor, they said, feels the Games can be a profitable venture and is interested in sharing in that profit.

The city has been embroiled in the Olympic controversy for months since it balked at the International Olympic Committee's insistence that the city assume financial responsibility for the Games.

Beer proposal okayed

CALGARY (CP) — City police and McMahon Stadium directors have endorsed a city council proposal for beer sales at Canadian Football League games.

The board of directors has decided to support Ald. Brian Lee's campaign to persuade the Alberta government to amend legislation to permit sale of beer in paper cups at the stadium, home park for Calgary Stampeders of the Western Conference.

In a news release, Lee said beer sales will "reduce the excess heavy drinking prior to games . . . and minimize violence by a reduction in liquor bottles being thrown by inebriated fans."

Lee added police, including Chief Brian Sawyer, endorsed his proposal "as a method of improving crowd control and eliminating unnecessary police."

The Edmonton Stadium Society will be asked to support the proposal, Lee said.

Glen Meadows retains first-place standing

Glen Meadows maintained its hold on first place in the Victoria and district inter-club golf league Wednesday night.

Rick Kent, Don Gowans, Reg Effa and Marty Richards won their matches as Glen Meadows upped its point total to 19 by defeating Victoria Golf Club 6½-2½.

Meanwhile, Gorge Vale moved into second place by knocking off Uplands by the same score and Royal Colwood nipped Cedar Hill 6-5.

★ ★ ★

CEDAR HILL 4, ROYAL COLWOOD 5
Lyle Crawford lost to Dave Mick 3 and 2; Greg Barnes lost to Ron Howard 3 and 2. Colwood won best ball 3 and 2.
Jim Rutledge lost to Bob Hogarth 3 and 2; Jim Cook lost to Brian Gendy 4 and 3. Cedar Hill won best ball 2 and 1.
Rick Gibson beat Mike Mousseau 3 and 1; Fred Worthington beat Pete Moretti 3 and 2. Cedar Hill won best ball 3 and 1.

UPLANDS 2½, GORGE VALE 6½
Ken Nott beat Grant Milliken 1 up; Dave McCall lost to Dave Donaldson 1 down. Best ball even.
Bruce Rands beat Earl Davies 4 and 2; Tony Pisto lost to Stu Holroyd 3 and 2. Gorge Vale won best ball 1 up.
Ted Pollard lost to Robin Steffanick 1 up; Robin Burrell lost to Ted Sarkissian 2 and 1. Gorge Vale won best ball 3 and 2.

VICTORIA 3½, GLEN MEADOWS 6½
Doug Mahovlic beat Al Robertson 7 and 6; John Hough lost to Rick Kent 4 and 2. Victoria won best ball 1 up.
Paul Harris lost to Don Gowans 4 and 2; Mike Fowles tied Mike Forman. Glen Meadows won best ball 2 and 1.
Terry Karpiuk lost to Reg Effa 2 and 1; Dave Anderson lost to Marty Richards 8 and 7. Glen Meadows won best ball 6 and 5.

Gorge Vale now has 16 points, two more than Cedar Hill.

Royal Colwood is fourth with 13½ points, followed by Victoria with 12 points, and Uplands with 6½.

Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill, who recently earned his CPGA playing card in Ontario, bowed to fellow-pro Bob Hogarth of Colwood 2 and 1. City amateur champion Dave Mick of Colwood downed Lyle Crawford of Cedar Hill 3 and 2.

Two weeks remain in the round-robin competition for the Willie Park Driver.

Feigner
. . . pitching legend

'King and Court' here

"King" Eddie Feigner and his hard-hitting courtiers are back in Victoria.

The "King and His Court" will display their impressive talents when they take on the Heywood All-Stars in a senior men's exhibition fastball game tonight at 7:30 in Royal Athletic Park.

Feigner, widely recognized as one of the greatest pitchers in the history of the game, is a legendary figure who requires only a three-man team to back him up.

His son Eddie Jr. is now a member of the team and along with first baseman Al Jackson and former major-league baseball player John Bateman provide the Court with impressive power.

Eddie Jr. hit 95 home runs in 217 games last season breaking the former world record of 94 set by Jackson in 1973.

Jackson holds the all-time record of 804 home runs and the Court record of 400 at bats without a strikeout.

Bateman, who played 917 major league games between 1963 and 1972 with Houston Astros, Montreal Expos and Philadelphia Phillies, is a newcomer to the court.

The six-foot-three catcher had his best season in 1966, batting .279, hitting 17 home runs and driving in 70 runs for the Astros.

Moretti defends honors

Defending champion Peter Moretti joins 54 other golfers in the 1978 Metchosin Open on Sunday at the Metchosin Golf Club. The first foursome tees off at 7:30 a.m.

The draw:

7:30 — G. Wastle, D. Roy, J. Iannarelli, H. Stadnyk.
7:38 — J. Wheatcroft, O. Smith, P. Fitzsimmonds, B. Wilcox.
7:46 — E. Laird, K. Wright, E. Catchpole, J. Weet.
7:54 — M. Tower, P. Cole, T. Wright, T. Cain.
8:02 — B. Pearson, C. Cuthbert, A. O'Brien, D. Schoeman.
8:10 — D. Proudfoot, A. Vandonkersgoed, K. Stewart, J. Mertes.
8:18 — E. Neal, R. Treleaven, R. Busby, M. Vandersteeg.
8:26 — B. Craigie, R. Milne, D. Williams, R. Adolphe.
8:34 — G. Sylvester, B. Carpenter, G. Neal.
8:42 — S. Schamehorn, H. Woodward, L. Sloker.
8:50 — D. Gordon Jr., J. Austin, K. Campbell.
8:58 — C. Johnson, B. Skinner, I. MacGregor, J. Anderson.
9:06 — N. Curran, P. Morretti, D. Lowe, D. Gordon Sr.
9:14 — R. Gracie, D. Fuller, J. Ferguson.
9:30 — A. Ulmer, E. Peters.

Hillman, who took over the coaching chores from Bobby Kromm last season, led the club to the league championship.

Braves sign top choice

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves announced Wednesday night the signing of baseball's No. 1 draft choice, third baseman Bob Horner of Arizona State, to a one-year contract.

Team officials said he may be in uniform with the major league club Friday night against Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lost students didn't know how to swim

CLAREMONT, Ont. (CP) — An official of St. John's School of Ontario said Wednesday that the 12 St. John's students who drowned on Lake Timiskaming earlier this week received no formal instruction from the school in swimming, lifesaving or first aid.

Michael Maunder, the school's assistant headmaster, said in an interview that St. John's did not require students or supervisors to have formal certification in such skills.

The tragedy occurred Sunday when a violent storm on the northwestern Quebec lake overturned three of four canoes. A 21-year-old instructor also died in the canoeing accident.

Maunder said some instructors did have first-aid certificates, but they were not required.

Instructors had a demonstrated skill in first aid, assessed by the school to be satisfactory, he added.

Maunder said he was sure that three instructors on the trip were trained in artifical respiration but was not certain about the fourth instructor.

"It's mandatory that there be a man on the trip that knows it," he said.

Maunder also said swimming had never been made a requirement because the wearing of life jackets was compulsory while in a canoe.

He added that the procedure when a canoe dumps was explained to the boys and "the key elements in any overturned canoe is that the boys listen to instruction because situations differ so much."

The responsibility for giving instruction rests with the man in charge of the canoe, he added.

Peter Croft, father of Simon Croft, one of the boys who drowned, said it would be a good idea for the school to teach water safety under extreme conditions.

Croft said he was planning to send another son, Darren, to the school, either this year or next year.

Maunder also said he was convinced that the same precautions taken on every trip for the last 15 years in two related trips in Edmonton and Selkirk, Man., were proper and adequate.

COURT PROBES TRUCK'S SPEED

Two witnesses indicated in Victoria county court Wednesday that a truck was travelling at roughly twice the speed limit when it went out of control on a sunny, dry afternoon May 4, 1977, striking and killing a pedestrian in the 1900-block Sooke Road.

But they also qualified their testimony in the first day of the trial of Scott MacLachlan, 18, of Colwood, accused of criminal negligence causing the death of Joan Marshall, 56, also of Colwood, and of criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle.

D'Arcy Kent, 18, a passenger in the 1975 Dodge ¾-ton pickup, said the vehicle was going towards Colwood Corners on Sooke Road and was entering an S-bend on a small hill when its speed picked up and went out of control.

He said the truck was doing 30 to 35 miles an hour before the curve and traffic was not heavy. When the speed increased it "felt like 70 to 80 miles an hour, something like that, I don't know. I don't know what caused the truck to go out of control. I didn't see the truck hit anything."

He told defence counsel Peter Klassen he didn't see the speedometer. And he conceded he wouldn't know if the truck was going 70 to 80 miles an hour. "So you really don't know," said Klassen. "No," replied Kent.

Douglas Paul McRae, driving alone in the opposite direction, said he saw the truck coming sideways occupying both lanes of traffic for that direction, strike a curb and roll over on a front lawn.

Asked by prosecutor Peter Birkett what the speed of the truck was, he said he didn't know. Asked to estimate the speed, he said 60 miles an hour. But McRae agreed with Klassen that his first answer—that he didn't know—would be more correct than his second answer.

Kent also said he, MacLachan and MacLachan's younger brother, Barry, had been drinking rye before setting out to drive to Belmont Park.

He said he had three or four drinks, Barry MacLachan had about the same and he thought Scott MacLachan had a little more but he wasn't sure. But later he agreed he was guessing about how much Scott MacLachan had to drink and he didn't know how much.

Asked if it was more logical to say that Scott MacLachan had less to drink than the other two, because he was absent for a time changing his pants, Kent said "yes." But when asked whether Scott MacLachan actually had more or less to drink than the other two, he said "I don't know."

John William Smith, an expert in the mechanical condition of vehicles, said he inspected the truck and could find no evidence of mechanical failure anywhere.

He also said that if the brakes were hit suddenly and hard, at 35 miles an hour, all four wheels would not lock. He said deflation of the left front and left rear tires was consistent with them hitting a curb.

Panel chief rebuked for airing Hydro finding

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority may not be "a chamber of horrors" but it leaves something to be desired in the field of management.

Crown corporations committee chairman Elwood Veitch tried to tell the committee more than that Wednesday, but was rebuked by other committee members for trying to air "preliminary findings" when the committee was still trying to determine how Hydro works.

Veitch had just started his "preliminary findings" when MLAs from opposition parties protested that the prepared statement he was reading from was out of order, "premature and the findings have never been approved by the committee."

Veitch had been attempting to bring the committee up to date on what had been accomplished in the inquiry into Hydro affairs and had got as far as saying that while he did not find the crown corporation to be "a chamber of horrors" he was concerned over "the imbalances in the management of power projects and breakdowns in the management structure."

He was challenged by the NDP members of the committee and by Vic Stephens (PC—Oak Bay) for making judgment calls before the investigations into Hydro were complete.

Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) complained that Veitch was "announcing conclusions not discussed with other committee members."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said he felt it "unusual for you to write a judgment before you have heard the evidence."

The red-faced Veitch finally ordered adjournment of the hearings for an indefinite period.

Macdonald and Stephens later said that there were many witnesses to be called and that the committee should continue to meet and call those witnesses.

Veitch joined the post-meetingdebate, saying the committee had adjourned indefinitely but not permanently.

"The committee will have at least a dozen more meetings this year on Hydro," he said. "The next meeting will be in about a month."

He added that he didn't expect further Hydro evidence to be called on the Duncan, Arrow and Mica dams.

Veitch said the various opposition protests "were just political postures and could be ignored."

Stephens and Macdonald denied that charge, with Stephens saying he had questioned Veitch "because I was concerned that the committee may have decided to pass on to something else when in actual fact it has not completed, even half-way completed, its investigations of the Mica, Duncan and Arrow projects."

Stephens said that as a trial lawyer he felt the conduct of Hydro could not be properly checked just by examining "officials of that corporation."

Macdonald said he couldn't understand how the committee could come to any conclusions until it had talked to "(David) Cass-Beggs," the man in charge of Hydro when the Mica powerhouse was built.

"It would not be fair to either Cass-Beggs or the people of B.C. to make a decision without talking to the former chairman," Macdonald said.

The committee began its inquiry into Hydro affairs after a series of stories written by Vancouver Province reporters Alex Young and Malcolm Turnbull stated there were many Hydro projects which needed explaining.

The reporters also charged in their early stories that they had been denied information by Hydro chairman Robert Bonner. They eventually turned to Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, a Hydro director, who turned their questions over to Veitch's committee.

The statement made by Veitch, although cut off by other committee members, thanked the reporters for "the spadework (which) opened the door to current practices followed by Hydro management in the administration of major power projects."

Whelan denies plan to form food cartel

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan denied Wednesday that Canada and other major food producing nations were planning a cartel similar to the one set up by OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Anyone who knows Gene Whelan would know he would not be the one to suggest such a thing like an OPEC cartel," the Canadian minister told a news conference here.

A Canadian report said Canada, the United States, Australia and Argentina were planning to form such an arrangement to stabilize prices and world grain stockpiles.

"OPEC is a cartel . . . We do not believe in that. I do not believe in that," said Whelan.

He said Canada had confidence that proper trading arrangements in basic foods could be negotiated at the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT) even though it believed some outside arrangement should also be made to include the Soviet Union, China and other nations not members of GATT.

Whelan also announced that Canada was offering to be host to the fifth United Nations World Food Council of Ministers annual session next year. The 36-nation council is winding up its fourth session in the Mexican capital and Whelan leads the Canadian delegation.

Vancouver businessman advertises for wife, fails

Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — Norm Babb has been looking for a wife.

Considering himself a successful businessman, he said he always knew: "If you want someone to know what you've got, advertise."

So Babb did. He hired an ad agency which took out a $7,000 three-quarter page ad in the Los Angeles Times beginning: "Would you help us?"

Babb, a sombre man with gray hair and a pale, grayish face, offered himself in the ad as: "Healthy, in his 40s, six feet tall, 175 pounds...not as good looking as Paul Newman... but... affluent..."

The "dream wife' with whom he seeks to share his four-bedroom apartment in Vancouver, British Columbia, with its combination dining-pool table, its picture-gallery wall (with photos of 30 women Babb photographed himself) and its nine cockatoos should be, the ad said:

"Between 25-35, healthy, have good taste, be beautiful and have a college education. She should be willing to live in the Northwest (in some luxury)."

Hundreds of women answered, Babb said, each sent her photo and a "job prospectus." The ad was placed in February, and replies are still coming in.

Babb was in Los Angeles recently in connection with his camera business — he owns 50 stores in the United States and Canada — and he interviewed some prospective wives. Out of "hundreds" of prospects, he said, he took 12 to dinner.

Nothing happened.

One was "a doggerino," he says. And one was a phony, sent by some screen writers in search of a gimmick for a movie. Also included were a nurse, a home economist, two with advanced degrees (business administration and English literture) and "just working girls."

He didn't like any of the 12.

Aside from the "doggerino," some were "so shy you could tell why they weren't married," he said, and one had a phobia about elevators.

"Can you imagine marrying someone who couldn't meet you on the 30th floor?" he asked incredulously.

Babb, who is twice divorced and has three grown children, was not the first with the idea of advertising for a wife. Men and women routinely advertise in European papers — although in small type on back pages — and last year in Manhattan, ad executive Michael Block took out ads on IRT East Side subway cars.

Block didn't find a wife, but he did get himself an agent, a book contract with possible movie rights, and a lot of publicity.

Babb said it was not publicity he wanted but "a companion to share with" — his travels, his apartment, his cockatoos.

None of the women he met through his ad, however, lasted more than one dinner. "I make decisions quickly," he said. "I knew in 30 minutes there was no interest there."

He is more patient with his birds, he admitted. "I see them differently. Birds are more helpless. I married the two most unhelpless ladies. I divorced them; they didn't divorce me."

"I don't like crowds, I don't like parties, groups of people, I dislike single bars and discos. How else do you meet people? What does an executive do who sees no one but his own staff?"

He chose Los Angeles for the ad, he said, because he decided that "L.A. has the widest variety of available females on the continent."

Woodward's NEW Charcoal

is HOT stuff

A superior Canadian made product with a natural wood-char smell.

• Lights easily • Long-lasting ✺High heat

Woodward's new charcoal briquettes have been manufactured and tested to give you the best combination of efficiency and value. They light easily and when they reach 100% "Ashover" (when all the briquettes turn grey for us non-technical types), they give off a consistently higher heat than other leading brands. However, where Woodward's charcoal really shines is in its 'staying power'. In tests, even after 1 hour and 40 minutes of burning, they were producing 500° of heat. That means you can cook your package of potatoes and onions and still have lots of heat to really sizzle the steak, long-lasting, even temperatures to cook the biggest roast, chicken or turkey to perfection. We think you will really like the way Woodward's charcoal cooks and when you check the price, we think you will appreciate the value.

10 lbs. 2.19 20 lbs. 4.19

Tips on Better Barbecuing

Always start your fire at least 35 minutes before you want to cook. This will give you the most efficient use of your charcoal. Use the right amount of charcoal for the size of the meal you plan. Too few briquettes will give you poor results while too many is wasteful.

Provincial COURT

A 25-year-old man who pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday to his fourth drinking-driving offence was given a 30-day jail sentence by Judge Blake Allan.

Defence lawyer Ken Walton entered a change of plea on behalf of Bernard Smith, 21 Latesse Road, on a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

Crown counsel James Main told the court Smith had three previous convictions for related offences. Smith was convicted Sept. 5, 1974, in Sidney of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and was fined $200; convicted of impaired driving Nov. 21, 1974, in Victoria, and fined $75; and convicted of impaired driving again on Jan. 26, 1976, in Duncan and sentenced to 14 days in jail.

•

A 24-year-old Esquimalt woman who received a bachelor of social work degree from the University of Victoria recently was fined $250 after pleading guilty to misrepresentation under the Canada Student Loans Act.

Susan Carol Richings, 919 Shearwater, entered the plea before Judge William Ostler.

Crown counsel Harold Turnham told the court that the woman made application for a loan of $1,420 and grant of $820 in May, 1977, and received $1,120.

Turnham said that the woman did not declare "substantial" assets on her application form.

•

PITCH-AND-PUTT IN HYDRO BILLS?

A nine-hole pitch-and-putt golf course was probably included as an item on electricity bills in British Columbia in the early 1970s.

And if that wasn't enough, so were a curling rink and a ski tow although no one is sure at this stage who picked up the tab.

The golf course, the ski tow and the curling rink were built as "fringe benefits" for workers constructing the giant Mica Creek Dam for B.C. Hydro.

That information came to light Wednesday morning during hearings on Hydro affairs by the crown corporations committee. The Mica dam project cost taxpayers $168 million and Hydro officials have promised to try to find out who paid for the recreational facilities.

It was Jack Kempf (SC—Omineca) who asked if such recreational facilities were built and who paid for them.

Hydro legal adviser William Mitchell said he thought he could "throw some light" on the question. He confirmed that the recreational facilities were built but was unable to confirm who paid for them.

It was pointed out that the Mica Creek construction camp was 80 miles from the nearest community.

PM 'diverting' from troubles

QUEBEC (CP) — NDP leader Ed Broadbent said Wednesday there was a danger that debate on Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional package would draw attention away from the real problems facing Canadians.

The purpose of Trudeau's constitutional proposals, particularly "that mindless thing about the Senate," Broadbent said was to get the government off the hook and divert attention from its disastrous policies.

"In any other country in the world they (the proposals) would be laughed out," he said. "What's good in them isn't new and what's new isn't good."

The idea of entrenching human and language rights in a new constitution was good, but this had already been proposed and no major politicians in Canada was against it, he said.

Trudeau's proposal to consult the provinces on the appointment of senators was borrowed from Conservative leader Joe Clark, Broadbent said.

"We should abolish the bloody Senate," he said, adding that in no other Western country had such an appointed body. He did not mention Britain's House of Lords.

Broadbent was in Quebec City to present his position on the Canadian textile and clothing industries at a meeting of the Amalgamated Textile and Clothing Workers's union executive.

Vancouver keeps free bus service

VANCOUVER (CP) — The free Vancouver downtown bus service will be continued until the end of the year, city council has decided.

Council voted to finance the service in the main shopping area on a month-to-month basis until Dec. 31 and to try to find additional cash sources, including the provincial government and downtown merchants.

City engineer Bill Curtis said that about 2,800 persons use the service a day.

Nkomo man most feared by Rhodesian military

By JACQUES CLAFIN

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — He's a hulk of a man who will growl and sneer at a question he dislikes. Then all will be forgiven and he'll put on a warm smile of the type that would draw a hug from any uninhibited child.

But Joshua Mqabuko Nyongolo Nkomo is the man most feared by the Rhodesian military.

At 61, having spent more than 10 years as a political detainee, he is the grand old man of African politics in the land blacks call Zimbabwe. He is working tenaciously to become its leader once white minority rule is ended.

Described by friends and foes as shrewd, he has managed to maintain close ties with Moscow while being viewed in the West as a moderate.

Currently he is building what Rhodesian military men regard as a very credible army. It could one day prove the determining factor in Rhodesia's five-year-old conflict.

Nkomo heads the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU), which has joined the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) of Marxist Robert Mugabe to form an alliance called the Patriotic Front.

The guerrilla-backed alliance is pledged to ensure the failure of the "internal" majority rule agreement signed by Prime Minister Ian Smith and three Rhodesia-based black leaders.

Smith frequently has expressed the hope Nkomo would ditch Mugabe and come home for talks. It is doubtful Nkomo would take such a step unless he got ironclad guarantees that power would then be his.

The military wing of Nkomo's party is the Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA), which a white Rhodesia army colonel recently said "poses the greatest single threat to this country."

Presently it is the military arm of Mugabe's ZANU, the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA), which is responsible for the lion's share of incidents. Military spokesmen say there are some 4,500 guerrillas in Rhodesia — a figure doubled by some black nationalists — of whom only some 650 are of Nkomo's ZIPRA.

But Mugabe's organization, drawing from several tribes, is deeply riven by frequent purges born of tribal, ideological and personal rivalries.

"One day ZANLA will wither away and die," says the army colonel, perhaps indulging in some wishful thinking.

Nkomo's ZIPRA, whose members are mostly Ndebele and Kalanga tribesmen of western Rhodesia, is a cohesive organization armed generously by Eastern bloc countries, well trained and disciplined, and structured along conventional lines although its men also receive guerrilla training.

Intelligence sources say ZIPRA fighters are trained by Russians in the Soviet Union and Cubans in Angola. The army is said to have 6,000 men trained and 6,000 more under training, considerably more strength than the three-battalion army of Zambia, Rhodesia's western neighbor.

While ZANLA operates mainly in sections of five fighters and five commissars with different assignments, ZIPRA works mostly in platoons and is said by Rhodesian army men to have succeeded in setting up a company headquarters in this country.

Unlike Mugabe's organization, the leadership of ZAPU-ZIPRA is undisputed. It includes unabashed capitalists who coexist happily with fervent Marxists. The unifying factor is Nkomo.

He's erudite, invulnerable and outrageous

Zubin Mehta is a music man of any season

By ANDREA HERMAN
Colonist-Copley News Service

Zubin Mehta, the Los Angeles Philharmonic conductor, at 41 is erudite, invulnerable, privileged and outrageous.

News magazines tag him Zubi Baby. The famous and near-famous dash across rooms to greet him.

He'll be boss man (come September) of the New York Philharmonic. He's been snapped nude in Paris-Match. He's on first-name basis with Horowitz and Heifetz.

He talks Mideast politics. Collects antiquities. Never drinks. Never smokes. But snacks all day on red hot peppers.

HE KIDS with lords and ambassadors and Golda Meir; at the same time he shuns cocktail parties thrown by old money in private clubs.

He enjoys quiet, privacy, the throne orchestral management has designated for him.

After rehearsal they swarm his dressing room. Reporters. An appointment secretary. PR people. Musicians.

It's a low-keyed suite done up in basic beige. Lots of orange throw-pillows and memorabilia and telephones. Three. An Israeli ram's horn. Pictures of Artur Rubinstein. A photo of Mehta's first wife and two kids next to a photo of his current wife, Nancy. A movie starlet blonde with well-modulated wavy hair.

SHE'S SMART, too. Early back (eight years ago) she asked mama-in-law to teach her all of Zubin's favorite Indian dishes. She harvests red peppers for him, also.

An interview with the master is a happening.

Zubin Mehta slouches down on his beige couch, throws a couple of orange pillows over his stomach (alludes to a diet), wipes his perspiring face with a thick beige towel, and yawns.

"If I yawn, it's not you.

"I always yawn during interviews.

"I HAVE given 500 lines, 500 times maybe more. It has come to the point (he's laughing now) as soon as I sit down for interview I start yawning."

With so many interviews, does he have pat answers?

"As far as pat answers are concerned, of course we have pat answers, because always the questions are the same!

"Yesterday I was interviewed on the television for the xth time and she wants to know my background in India. Now, I have been saying this background for 16 years in this town.

"NOW, I hope they know that I come from Bombay and my father was a musician. How many times am I gonna say this?"

Do his sergeants-at-arms keep him insulated?

"Yes. They're supposed to. But not if a conductor phones and wants to ask Mehta for some advice. Those people would never be turned away."

The conductor: 'I'm not a plain sailing person. I like to take risks.'

And what after New York?

"After New York? You already fired me?"

Will he stay there 20 or 30 years?

"I DON'T know. Maybe three years. That's my contract. I want to see what I can do. If I'm beneficial to them and vice versa, I think it will be nice, otherwise we'll say goodbye." Transcending everything else is Mehta's self-assurance. Everyone wants to shake his hand, to touch him. Scores stand outside the stage door just for a glimpse.

"I'm strong that way. When I was leaving a meeting they (the New York Philharmonic management) said, 'Oh, we'll change you!' I said, 'No, you won't. I'm gonna change you.'"

DESPITE basking with the grandees, his mansion's dining table, his fondness for custom-tailored suits, Mehta is a man of basic tastes.

When he wants to play his new recordings he must go to a friend's house and listen because "I don't have a good enough player."

He does, though, have a stereo in his Mercedes, but stressed it came with the car.

Where once Mehta had an active bachelor social life, now he's eager to stay home most of his leisure hours. Vacation, too.

THE TWO Mehtas and a daughter (she's from his first marriage) live in Brentwood, a classy suburb of Los Angeles in a Cliff-May designed home that's secluded and woodsy. He has a son in school in New York.

He relishes quiet, he says. And he's a fussy eater, too.

After a concert Mehta rushes home, changes into his Indian shirt, heads for a cushioned corner in the kitchen and begins supper. Supper is chicken Moghlai simmered with sour cream, tomatoes and spices. Yes, and a dish of red hot peppers.

Although a devoted Parsi (a Zoroastrian sect that fled Persia 12 centuries ago from India), Mehta has an unswerving commitment to Israel.

MEHTA flew to Israel and conducted the Israel Philharmonic during the Six-Day War.

Why?

"I went because they had no conductor. The guest conductor had just packed up and left."

Music for morale?

"They can't do without it. I mean, let's say California is at war with Nevada and Oregon, or whatever it is. I don't think people will die to hear music at that time.

"But in Israel it becomes a vital point.

"WHEN THE country's independence was signed, the quartet from the orchestra played. During the signing. You understand?

"The orchestra is much closer to the people in office. Golda needs a ticket, she phones the manager and says, 'Give me a ticket tonight.' It's not like here.

"I'm not a plain sailing person. I like to take risks and ah, that's an orchestra that takes risks.

"I make them now take risks here. Never used to be.

"This orchestra used to love conductors that just came and had a good beat and didn't ruffle them and took the regular tempos. I think now it's different here."

DOES THE New York Philharmonic take risks?

"I don't know the orchestra, really."

Can a conductor be in control of making bad or good music?

"In an orchestra like the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the standard is basically so high that let's say a person comes as a guest conductor who is not very able. He can't bring the standard down on any accepted master. He could make it dull."

In Mehta's view a conductor must be a confident guide who makes his musicians feel comfortable. And the conductor must have clout.

Mehta's clout is noticed. He claims his musicians' full attention at every concert. They watch him intently.

"Of course. You don't know how I suffer with orchestras that don't look. Their music directors have not demanded that."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been "bringing" things home from the office for years. I am scared to death that one of these days he will be caught. Lately I've been having nightmares and wake up in a cold sweat.

He has brought home furniture (desks, tables, chairs), tools, office equipment (both manual and electrical), and clothing (uniforms, including pants, shirts, shoes and jackets), which he wears around the house but not to work. How he gets the stuff out is a mystery to me. Either the guards are blind or they are in on it.

I have told him many times I hate to see him bring these things into the house. He looks me straight in the eye and says the business is so big they can afford it and because he has worked for so long "they owe it to him."

At age 40 he is not about to listen to a lecture on morality. His ideas are already formed and I know I can't change him. Our children are too young to understand what is going on but I worry that one day they will discover the truth. When this happens I may have to take them and leave.

I have always been a very scrupulous person and it is difficult for me to describe the agony I have suffered over this man's lack of integrity.

In most other ways he is a good husband and believe it or not, he is an excellent father. No one would dream that my husband steals like this from his employer.

Can you offer me some words of wisdom? I feel helpless and trapped and afraid of the future. — The Wife Of A Man With Taking Ways.

Dear Wife: You are in a tough spot because you cannot ask anyone to speak to your husband about his "problem" for obvious reasons. Your best hope is to hand him this column and tell him the letter is yours.

I will address myself to this "good husband" and "excellent father," and pray along with you that between the two of us we can reach him.

It's difficult not to be ho-hum-and-here-we-go-again over Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf's recent announcement of the formation of a nine-member task force investigating the future of the arts in Victoria.

Just how many studies and hours of informed discussion have there been in the past particularly on the question of an arts centre cum convention hall? At least a half a dozen tabled reports in 10 years. What action was taken can be answered by anyone who has been to a symphony concert at the tatty Royal within the last year.

Bawlf's task force isn't confined simply to the question of an arts or perhaps the more descriptive term, civic centre. It is to look into the possibility of expanding arts education facilities in the city but more interesting is the question of an annual arts festival.

Already this year the McPherson Foundation has tabled with the minister a report calling for a Pacific Rim Festival favoring an emphasis on vocal arts. Existing alongside the live performances are to be scientific and other social conferences which on paper turn the idea into something like a bouillabaisse from the Pacific.

It's unlikely that Bawlf's interest in a festival for Victoria has as much to do with the arts as a means of extending the area's tourist season. He has said as much. An arts festival is a lucrative addition to the local economy, as illustrated by what the Bard has done for Ashland, Ore., and Stratford. At the Ontario city, festival visitors left $14 million while at Ashland the figure is only slightly lower.

Presumably no one will be so naive as to endorse the festival and expect the tourists to come in droves and leave tens of millions behind in the first years. Obviously it takes time, with considerable government and corporate money, to establish a reputation which draws people from afar.

The Stratford Festival, now in its 26th season, finds itself widely regarded as having one of the leading theatre companies in the world. And that enviable position is a direct result of its board of directors insisting from the beginning on securing at least a nucleus of the best talent available in the world. In that first summer that meant Tyrone Guthrie, Alec Guinness and designer Tanya Moiseiwitsch. This summer the company which now doesn't openly boast of stars has attracted two of theatre's leading performers, Maggie Smith and Brian Bedford.

What all this would mean to Victoria is that any festival expected to draw from beyond Sidney had better be offering something a cut above the average. Any attempt to shortcut costs by staging a festival relying on local talent rather than imported, albeit expensive, performers and directors will only defeat its original purpose. While the Victoria Symphony and the Bastion Theatre may be carving a niche for themselves, neither's reputation would entice busloads from Calgary or Portland.

Certainly the country's most successful festivals are those built about a single theatrical theme. (Other than the moderately-known Guelph Festival, music alone doesn't appear to have been as successful a draw as theatre. (An attempt six years ago by Stratford Festival founder Tom Patterson to establish an opera festival in the border city of Sarnia got as far as appointing a musical director and producing plans for an opera house but nothing more.)

With Stratford already claiming Shakespeare, and Niagara-on-the-Lake having latched onto Shaw, a Victoria festival would presumably have to look elsewhere. The logical choices, considering Victoria's tourist image and availability of supportive musical talent, would undoubtedly be a festival initially combining a season of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas and plays by Noel Coward. Both have a fanatical following but rarely do either get full-scale brilliant productions in this part of the world.

The idea of a permanent springtime festival for Victoria is a good one. It should be supported, but only on the understanding that any festival in Victoria will be built upon the highest world standards.

The Arts

CHIT—CHAT

. . . The symphony's Year of the Maestros is indeed looking more like Where Have All the Maestros Gone? as yet another auditioning conductor bows out. This time it was Jose Serebrier. He's the third to say thanks but no thanks. It's doubtful it will affect the symphony's reputed booming re-subscription campaign. Guest soloists and the orchestra itself are surely what count in the end. . . . An interesting conclusion has come out of that Canada Council study on theatre schools recently released. (One of its authors was Malcolm Black director of Comedians last season at the Bastion and slated for Twelfth Night next year.) In a nutshell it seems to be saying "shape up." Among other things it concludes there isn't enough teaching talent for more than four English theatre schools. Apparently there are now about 20. . . . Camosum College is going ahead with its theatre program after what one official labels "a major reorganization." A new head, the result of a reputed worldwide search, is expected to be named sometime this summer. . . . Margaret Martin reports that the CBC is rerunning its award winning Emily Carr two-part docudrama this July in which she starred. Some local actresses were crying the blues over the shortage of female roles at the Bastion last season but Margaret certainly didn't stay at home cursing her fate. She was in Pygmalion in Regina, The Contractor in Winnipeg and The Guardsman in Edmonton. Last week she was at Gibson's doing a Beachcomber for CBC. . . . Maxim Mazumdar, whose Oscar Remembered at The Belfry last fall was the best night of theatre in Victoria last season, took the show to London's May Fair Theatre last month and reputedly collected a dozen curtain calls. The show is to return to London for a three-week run after a stint at the Edinburgh Festival. Mazumdar sent a note off to The Scribe (his first ever to a critic, he claimed) following his Victoria appearance thanking him for some observation or another in his review which apparently had eluded other critics. Now if only the locals like the McPherson Foundation's Allan Purdy could learn to send such charming notes. . . . The Bastion Theatre is losing an invaluable employee when production manager Ian Pool joins Ottawa's National Arts Centre as assistant production director this fall. . . . The Baston summer theatre school classes are filling quickly. . . . The cheeky little Belfry has had the nerve to invite Prince Philip to its summer show, Dames At Sea when he's here Aug. 7. Apparently his itinerary isn't as firm as some think and besides somebody with of-the-manor-born connections has passed the invitation on through a friend of the royal family. . . . In the meantime, there's a rehearsal slated today for the city hall area for the symphony and municipal types rating a presentation to the prince at that what is now being called a royal command performance by the symphony.●

ON THE WALLS . . . . Local artist Myfanwy Pavelic has a major show with works from 1950 to 1978 opening this week at the Burnaby Art Gallery. It's there through July for those finding themselves on the mainland. . . . San Francisco's Isobel Pollard, who has donated an estimated 800 works to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, lectures tonight at the gallery. Her topic, not surprisingly, is The Story of the Pollard Collection — My Inspiration and Goal. . . . Circle Craft Society holds its Fibres Festival this week with workshops at 69 Bastion Square and a juried exhibition over the weekend at The Empress. Incidentally the exhibition portion of the festival will include fashion shows along with modern dance displays utilizing pieces of cloth and weaving equipment. . . . Along the same line is an exhibition of contemporary textiles opening this week at the Fan Tan Gallery. . . . Continuing are Mary Arnold's photograms and Ken Straiton's photographs at Open Space; landscapes, seascapes and florals by Marie Verwoord and John Kambeel at the Emily Carr Arts Centre and Joan MacGregor's native art and culture studies at Karibu's Upper Gallery.

White asparagus arrival hailed in Germany

By PHYLLIS HANES
Colonist-Monitor News Service

FRANKFURT, West Germany — The Germans make a big fuss about asparagus the same way North Americans make a big fuss about the first native strawberries and the first sweet corn from local farms.

With the arrival of spring and "Spargel" time in Germany nearly every restaurant has a special asparagus menu in addition to the regular bill of fare.

The plump ivory-white stalks are served with rose-pink salmon, new potatoes, and the first tiny strawberries, in castles along the Rhine as well as in small towns and cities.

The big difference between asparagus in German and asparagus in the North America is that the German crop produces a thick, white stalk. When it is fresh it is mellow and buttery and delicious. The peak of the season is around June 1.

The German white is grown in many areas, but in spite of local loyalties, most Germans admit that Schwetzinger is the place where the best asparagus is grown. In an old castle with beautiful gardens there also is a restaurant where it is given very special attention.

It seems that Elector Karl Theodor, who occupied the castle in the 1700s, did a great deal to cultivate the asparagus in the area which has sandy soil, ideal for growing this vegetable.

Germany is not, of course, the only country that "celebrates" fresh asparagus. The French, Austrians,

White asparagus vendor in Nuremberg

Dutch, and Italians also enjoy the all-white and white-with-purple-tip varieties.

There is not much green asparagus in Europe, but I've been told Fauchon in Paris sometimes has the jumbo green, probably at a jumbo price.

Most serve it hot with melted butter and salt and pepper, or melted butter and hard-boiled eggs and nutmeg. Some serve a soft-boiled egg for dipping.

The most common way of cooking asparagus is to boil it in salted water in small bundles tied with string to prevent breaking the tops. Cook 15 minutes or less depending on the thickness of the stalks. Drain carefully, then serve with melted butter or Hollandaise sauce.

Some of the familiar toppings are melted butter, plain, or with breadcrumbs browned on butter or with grated lemon rind sprinkled over the crumbs. They also add chopped almonds, browned in butter, or chopped hazelnuts and often top the asparagus with a white-mustard sauce.

I sampled the fresh white asparagus in at least a dozen different ways in Germany a year ago. Since then I have been able to try some of the recipes at home and most are excellent with our own fresh green spears. Here are two of my favorites:

ASPARAGUS IN HAM-CREAM
(Spargel in Schinkencreme)

2 pounds asparagus, cooked
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups asparagus stock
2 egg yolks beaten into
¼ cup sweet cream
½ to ¾ cup ham, minced
Salt to taste
Sugar to taste. (optional).

Drain asparagus well and keep warm and covered. Heat butter in saucepan and when bubbling, stir in flour. Stir about four minutes until flour begins to color then add asparagus stock and beat with wire whisk on very low heat until sauce is smooth and thick. Bring to a boil once, then remove from heat.

Add a little hot sauce to the egg yolk-cream mixture, then turn it back into the pot. Add cubed ham. Stir and heat but do not boil. Flavor with salt and sugar. The sugar is a German touch. Serve over asparagus.

ASPARAGUS POLONNAISE

3 dozen medium asparagus
¼ cup sweet butter
2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs
1 small hard-boiled egg, finely chopped
1½ teaspoons finely chopped parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

Cook asparagus until crisp-tender. Meanwhile melt butter. When it foams stir in bread crumbs. Cook over low heat until mixture browns. Remove from heat and pour over cooked asparagus. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped egg and parsley.

Salary deserved, but it's impossible

OTTAWA (CP) — The government cannot afford to pay every Canadian housewife a salary, even though she does work worth an average of $187.32 for a 49-hour week, concludes a report released Monday.

The report, Five Million Women: A Study of the Canadian Housewife, was presented to the federal Advisory Council on the Status of Women by its author, Monique Proulx, a council researcher.

More study is needed on the whole question of work in the home, says the report. But any formula for payment should take into account family income and whether or not the homemaker has children.

Among her chores, the average housewife cooks 18 hours a week (work valued at $3.97 an hour), cleans for about 8 1-2 hours (work worth $2.86 an hour), and spends seven hours shopping and managing the household ($5.08 an hour).

A change in attitudes toward women's role is needed, says the report. "As long as attitudes to 'a woman's place' remain unchanged, an excessively large share of the family responsibilities, both in education and in housework, will continue to rest on her shoulders."

Young women must be encouraged to think of their long-term future, the report adds. Access to university must be made easier, and courses must place greater value on the maturity acquired during years of child-raising.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How does one tell whether or not one is intolerant of milk, per your recent discussion of this subject? I suspect my eight-year-old son has this problem. Must I continue to deprive him of that delicious food in all its forms, ice cream, for instance? — Mrs. P.T.

I'll take your first question first, then I have something to add that should be of interest to you regarding your second question — as to whether the child has to be deprived of milk nutrients.

The only certain way to find out if your child is intolerant of the milk sugar (lactose) is through blood sugar tests. The sugar is measured at fasting, then periodically during the next hour and a half after consuming a quantity of the lactose. If the blood sugar level doesn't rise above a certain point at the end of the testing it can be concluded that he is, indeed, intolerant. Symptoms are abdominal distress, bloating, cramps, flatulence, and diarrhea.

Until recently, there was little to do about this problem (which afflicts millions) other than to avoid milk sugar in all forms. Now, ways have been found to break down the offending milk sugar (disaccharide) into simpler sugars (monosaccharides), thus making milk digestible.

A new substance recently marketed pre-hydroyzes milk sugar before consumption, making it usable for intolerant persons. It is a powder substance added to milk at home before drinking (Lact-Aid).

Manufacturers warn that it should not be used by galactosemics (those with a hereditary disorder disturbing carbohydrate use) and that care be taken with diabetic diets. Ask your doctor about this possibility.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I went to my doctor because I had loss of balance and dizziness. he told me to take Nicobid. Can you explain what this is? What is it for? I am 50. — Mrs. L.M.

It is a commercial brand of niacin, a vitamin B compound. It may be of help in patients with ataxia, a loss of muscular co-ordination.

Elementary Summer School

The Greater Victoria School Board introduces a new program: summer school for elementary pupils.

Four specialized units will offer remedial tutoring in reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic.

This program is for children who require skill maintenance; and also for those with learning disabilities.

Dates and times of classes vary.

Place: George Jay Elementary School 1118 Princess Ave.

Cost: $10 registration.

In most cases the schools will notify parents of children who need summer school assistance. However, any parent is free to obtain an application form from a school.

Enrolment is limited. Application deadline: June 23.

VIA's new Fare For All Plan. Great value and savings for everyone!

At VIA, we're giving you more value for your travel dollars. To do it, we've introduced our new Fare For All Plan. When you're making travel plans, consider us. We've got fares for every occasion and every need, and savings for almost everyone. That's something to cheer about!

VIA's new Fare For All Plan starts with basic fares which are good for travel on any day of the year.

In addition to these new basic fares, our Fare For All Plan includes a package of incentive fares that offers a whole range of ways to save:

Round Trip Excursion Fares. Plan your trip to qualify for a 3-day or 7 to 30-day excursion fare and you will pay only the basic one-way fare, plus one third for your round trip.

3 days – Applies between any two points when the one-way fare is $36 or less. Valid all year, (except for the Christmas and Easter holidays) for going journeys commencing any day except Friday. Good for return any time up to midnight of the third day.

7-30 days – Applies between any two points when the one-way fare is $37 or more. Good every day, September 16 through June 14, except for the Christmas and Easter holidays. Going journeys may commence any day except Friday. Return 7 or up to 30 days from the day you start your trip. And no advance booking restrictions either!

Group Fares. Get together and save. When two or more adults travel together, the first person pays the basic fare and the remainder of the group enjoys discounts of 25% to 40% depending on the number in the group. (It's a great idea for family travel too. Leave the car at home and enjoy your trip.) Two children count as one adult for group rate purposes.

VIAPASS. Enjoy unlimited travel at a fixed cost on VIA trains or CP Rail trains in designated territories. Depending on territory, passes can be valid for 8, 15, 22 or 30 days. They enable you to travel economically at any time and are priced even lower from September 16 through June 14 except for the Christmas and Easter periods.

65 Plus Fares. Under VIA's new Fare For All Plan, people 65 or over may travel for one third off basic one-way rates. These fares are good any day except for the Christmas period.

Children's Fares. Children under five years of age travel free. Children 5 to 11 inclusive pay only half the basic fare. Little people get big savings with VIA.

We've Got Lots of Choices. As you can see, we've got something for just about everyone. As with any special fare plan, some restrictions do apply. But the important thing is, when you're making travel plans, think of VIA. We can show you some exciting ways to save money.

When, Where and How. The Fare For All Plan is in effect NOW. Between all points served by VIA, as well as between points served by CP Rail. Call your Travel Agent today or get in touch with your closest VIA or CP Rail sales office. Until further notice, these new fares will be available for through travel or round trips using only one or other of the two railways' lines.

Be good to yourself, take the train.

Beating wings echo like tom-toms before invasion

After a decade, locusts gathering in Africa

By DAVID LAMB
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

NAIROBI, Kenya — They arrive by the millions, blackening the sky. The beat of their tiny wings echoes across the land like tom-toms heralding an enemy invasion.

For nearly a decade Africa has been spared the havoc of their destruction. But now, ironically aided by war, the desert locusts are gathering again over the plains of East Africa, marshaling their forces for another attack on the region's farming heartland.

Scientists representing seven East African nations say it is still too early to tell if the locust concentration has reached plague proportions or if their campaign to head off the attack will be successful. But the potential threat, they say, is enormous, and the destructive powers of the locust are awesome.

Each slim, shiny locust, weighing less than an ounce, eats its weight daily. Multiply that by 20 or 30 million over an area of 300 square miles or more, and a nation's food crop can be consumed in a matter of days.

Desert locusts can ravage hundreds upon hundreds of farmland acres in minutes. They can level scrub forests like buzz saws. And when they move on to another fertile area — their powerful wings pushing them along at 10 mph for up to 20 hours a day — there will be no plant life left where they have dined.

In 1958, when East Africa suffered its worst locust plague in memory, a swam of 40 million locusts swept through 600 square miles of Somalia a day, devouring an estimated 80,000 tons of food daily. That same year locust damage in the north African nation of Morocco was estimated at $9 million, and in Ethiopia locusts consumed the grain supply of a million people. In India they laid bare vast fields of cotton.

The world locust population has been in decline for 16 years, partly because of drought in many African regions and partly because of continuous control measures carried out by 50 nations with the help of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

But heavy rains throughout much of East Africa this year and last have turned the farmland lush and green. Many deserts have become flower gardens. The greenery makes ideal breeding conditions for the desert locust. The female lays about 300 eggs in her life span of three to six months.

Additionally, two wars in the Horn of Africa have made some of the prime breeding areas off-limits to insect-control workers. Insecticide spraying and other control measures have been abandoned in Eritrea, the province where guerrillas are fighting a secessionist war against Ethipia, and have been drastically reduced in the Ogaden region, where Ethiopia and Somalia fought a conventional war that ended last March and where guerreilla activity continues.

The first swarm of locusts was seen in the Jizan area of Saudi Arabia last January. Since then their numbers have grown and the swarms have moved southward into Ethiopia, Somalia and Djibouti. Last weekend the first sightings in Kenya were reported.

"At this stage," said Food and Agriculture official Jean Roy in Rome, "the locust fledglings of a new generation have to be fought, because if the swarms of mature locusts are left to escape to the desert beyond, the fight could become almost hopeless, bringing a plague of extremely dangerous proportions."

The campaign here is directed by a seven-nation body known as the Desert Locust Control Organizaion for Eastern Africa, established in 1962. It is headquartered in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and maintains a regional office in Nairobi with laboratory facilities and 10 light aircraft for observation and spotting.

After a trip to Ethiopia this week, the chairman of the organization, Agriculture Minister John Malecela of Tanzania, appealed for international help to combat the locust invasion. The food And Agriculture Organization has allocated an additional $800,000 for insecticide and emergency equipment, and Ethiopia has declared a national emergency.

For reasons that scientists cannot fully explain, locust plagues in Africa repeat themselves about every 10 years. The last was in 1969. In most years, the desert locusts live in what is known as a solitary stage, moving about the marshes and river deltas but not migrating in great numbers.

Periodically, some mechanism triggers the locusts into another, more gregarious stage. As their conditions become more numerous and the hoppers — young locusts — become agitated, their skin grows very dark and their growth cycle speeds up, and as the presence of other locusts apparently excites and stimulates them, they fly off in swarms to look for new feeding grounds, their wings and the air currents carrying them hundreds of miles.

Killing the locusts with insecticide is easy and effective, particularly when they are grounded by the mists of early morning.

Socreds selling firm acquired by NDP

Canadian Press

The Social Credit government took another step Wednesday to divest itself of assets acquired by the former New Democratic Party administration.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt told a news conference the government was formally putting Panco Poultry up for sale. Hewitt had said previously it was the government's intention to sell the company, which produces 35 per cent of the poultry raised in B.C.

Hewitt said the Panco operation, which consists of eight turkey farms, four chicken farms, a feedmill, a poultry processing plant and a hatchery in the Vancouver area, had been appraised at $10 million—double what the NDP bought it for.

He said the farms would be sold separately, but the processing plant, hatchery and feedmill would be sold as a package.

Hewitt said the company had made a profit every year, but the government had made a philosophical decision that it shouldn't be involved with businesses that should be owned and operated by the private sector.

He also said Panco president Ted Cohen was stepping down, and would be replaced by Rex Werts. Cohen was one of a number of persons who expressed interest in purchasing the operation, Hewitt said.

The Social Credit government recently set up the B.C. Resources Investment Corp., a public company which took over many assets purchased by the NDP.

Seal kill falls short

VANCOUVER (CP) — Patrick Moore, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, said this year's harp seal hunt off Canada's East Coast fell short of its quota of 170,000 animals by more than 20,000 because there were not enough harp seals in the area.

A spokesman for the federal fisheries service said in Ottawa that unusually thick ice hampered the hunt. Canadian and Norwegian fishermen took 149,578 harp seals.

Moore said, however, that the hunt was extended by several weeks because of the difficult ice conditions.

"There was no restraint on the hunting at all—they had more time and bigger quotas—but they still couldn't reach the quota which indicates to me that there were just not enough harp seals out there," Moore said.

This year's quota was 180,000, including 10,000 for Greenland residents.

Fisheries spokesman Clarence Button said Tuesday that the government has no indication so far of the Greenland catch.

Button said the thickness of the ice was the worst seen in the area since 1964. He said that the government icebreaker could not navigate through the ice in some places.

Greenpeace has sent an expedition to protest the Newfoundland seal hunt for the last few years.

'Morgentaler a precedent'

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government could order a new trial in 1976 for Dr. Henry Mortgentaler, it could order a new trial for Alexander Peter Treu, Opposition MPs argued Wednesday.

They cited the court battles of Mortgentaler, prosecuted on charges of performing illegal abortions, as they continued demands in the Commons for a new trial for Treu. Treu was convicted last month during a secret trial of violating the Official Secrets Act.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker and Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) were arguing for immediate use by the government of a 1968 amendment to the Criminal Code which permits the justice minister to order a new trial in extraordinary circumstances.

"If ever there were extraordinary circumstances, they are in the present case," said Diefenbaker. He said Prime Minister Trudeau knows the re-trial law amendment well since it was introduced by former justice minister John Turner shortly after Trudeau left the justice minister's portfolio and became prime minister in 1968.

However, Trudeau said government intervention at this point would not be a proper procedure because Treu is appealing his conviction to higher courts and no formal application for a new trial has been received by the government.

Justice Minister Ron Basford later told reporters the government will only grant a new trial in cases where there is new evidence or a new circumstance which had not been considered by the courts.

The law does not require that the appeal process is first exhausted but he said he is not aware of a new trial ever being ordered beforehand.

GIANT RATS DRIVE CHICAGO FAMILY FROM HOME

CHICAGO (UPI) — For nights on end, Bill Henderson lay awake in his West Side apartment, rifle in hand and the lights on.

Rats—some the size of cats—strutted across the two rooms, snarling at anything that moved, chewing the woodwork and eyeing Henderson's children.

"One big rat wrapped its tail around the baby's throat while the baby was lying in its crib," Henderson said. "If I hadn't shot it, the baby'd be dead."

Tired and afraid, Henderson, 24, his wife, Betty, and their three children, ages one to four moved into a motel. Then, when the money ran out, the Hendersons made the family's 1974 auto their home.

Henderson said he found it difficult getting aid for his family during their flight from the rodent-infested West Side apartment and believes some groups discriminated against him — because he is white.

He said he went to the Gospel League Home for stranded women and families to seek refuge for his wife and children.

"They were all black," he said. "The Gospel League lady saw we were white and tried to close the door on us. She said 'We can't help you.'"

He said he was also turned down by the Salvation Army and other groups.

But he said police finally referred him to the Red Cross, which put his family up in a YMCA for a night. The out-of-work mechanic said police referred him to the Chicago Housing Authority when they learned he had been promised a job driving an ice cream truck. The CHA found the Hendersons an apartment in a public housing project.

Henderson said he had complained repeatedly to city agencies about the rats but got no help.

A city health inspector and an assistant state's attorney confirmed his complaint had been investigated.

"We're taking action to have the building razed as a public health hazard but the rats will eat it before we get authorization to tear it down," said a prosecutor, who asked not to be identified.

The manager of the rat-infested building said the rat problem was caused by tenants, who dumped garbage indiscrimnately about the building. But tennants denied the allegation.

"The building people say we got rats because people leave garbage around. But that ain't true," said one tenant.

Article in Pravda condemns Peking for war-mongering

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Communist Party daily Pravda has accused China of preparing for war and said Chinese foreign policy jeopardizes world peace.

"Peking not only preceeds from the inevitability of a new world war, but is prodding it on, stepping up the material preparations for war," the newspaper said.

It accused China of trying to make lay to Soviet territories along the Soviet-Chinese border, of stockpiling nuclear weapons and over-building stronger relations with the United States and NATO.

Chinese war preparations are a familiar theme in the Soviet press, but the Pravda article, which filled one and one half pages, was more direct than earlier criticisms.

"The foreign policy of Peking is a serious destabilizing factor of the international situation," Pravda said.

"China is rapidly increasing her stockpiles of all types of weapons, including missile nuclear armaments (and) is searching for new types of weapons and military technique in the West."

Pravda traced the military expansion within China to what it called "realizing Mao's idea," claiming under present Chinese leadership, "the flywheel of militarism is accelerating."

"Already China has the biggest land army in the world and its spending on defence for a number of years exceeds 40 per cent of the expenditure part of the state budget," Pravda said.

Job shock lurked for Canadian students in New Zealand

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — An unpleasant surprise greeted a group of 28 Canadian students arriving in New Zealand in late May.

There seems to have been a breakdown in communication somewhere. They arrived expecting to find vacation jobs awaiting them—but found no guarantee of jobs at all.

The students said they had been told they could choose among 150 jobs on arrival.

They came to New Zealand on a three-month exchange program arranged between the Association of Student Councils of Canada and the New Zealand Student Travel Bureau.

One student, Hugh Tye, from University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, said he and other students had been told by a representative of AOSC that there would be a list of jobs in New Zealand. But when they arrived there was no list and no guarantee of jobs.

Tye said some of the students were really upset. They had money for only a few weeks. Some would have come anyway, but others hadn't enough money to stay for long. Several had spread out over the country in search of work.

The director of the New New Zealand Student Travel Bureau, David Cuthbert, said he could not understand why the Canadian students were told there would be jobs waiting. Such guarantees had never been given in the past. He had sent a cable to AOSC asking for information on the matter.

Cuthbert said jobs were arranged for New Zealand students going to Canada on exchange because that was the only way they could get a work permit.

All the Student Travel Bureau contracted to do for Canadian students was to supply them with two nights' accommodation and information on accommodation, taxation, social security and accident compensation benefits. Information was given on possible jobs, but with no guarantee.

In any case, he said, visiting students usually wanted to move around the country to see as much as possible in the time available, so they did not want permanent work. The bureau was prepared to make loans available to any in financial trouble.

Possibly the problem has arisen because the employment situation is more difficult this year than ever in the last generation. New Zealand is one of the few countries which has never experienced any significant level of unemployment since the Second World War—until this year.

The figure still is low by world standards—less than three per cent of the work force—but this is far higher than most young New Zealanders have ever known. It may become more severe in the next few months during the Southern Hemisphere winter.

MORE RESEARCH ON DIET-CANCER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Research on links between diet and cancer will expand, the U.S. National Cancer Institute said after being criticized as devoting too few of its resources to the subject.

"I would confidently expect that the level of support for nutrition research will increase," Dr. Arthur Upton, NCI director, said under questioning at a U.S. Senate hearing.

The previous day, leading cancer researchers said the institute had avoided investigating ways of preventing cancer through good nutrition and instead had devoted itself to an unsuccessful search for a cancer cure. "I feel strongly that nutrition research is consciously ignored by NCI," nutritionist Peggy Fry of the University of Texas said Monday.

Upton read a statement reviewing research findings in the area. When he finished, Senator George McGovern, chairman of the Senate nutrition subcommittee, asked: "How can you assert that diet has a close relationship to cancer formation and then submit a budget that calls for only a little more than one per cent of the budget for nutrition research?"

The NCI director responded: "I have asked that question myself."

During the subsequent question-and-answer session, Upton said that he expected funding by the cancer institute for nutrition research to increase.

He said only about one per cent of the grant applications to NCI were for nutrition research. "I think that is changing," he added.

When McGovern said about one-half of all cancers might be diet-related, Upton said, "The institute shares your concern and is doing what it can to give more emphasis to this."

In his review of research, Upton said scientists had been unable to agree on exactly what foods caused cancer. "One of the factors that has been strongly implicated is obesity, which is thought to contribute to the high incidence of cancers of the colon, breast, ovary, prostate and endometrium (lining of the uterus)," he said.

He said that studies had found that vitamin C and vitamin E might help protect a person from getting cancer. In addition, low consumption of dietary fibre wasassociated with cancer of the colon.

Hydro ordered to disclose building fees

Building rental fees and lease charges paid by B.C. Hydro on the Lower Mainland will be made public for the first time within the next few weeks.

Wednesday the crown corporations committee, chaired by Elwood Veitch, ordered Hydro to supply the committee with full details of all building rental and lease locations.

The directive was issued after Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) told the committee that Hydro recently announced that it was considering leasing more space in Vancouver while it has 40,000 square feet of property in Burnaby.

The committee is investigating all Hydro activities as part of a full investigation of five major crown corporations.

Wednesday morning Macdonald told the committee he was amazed that Hydro was considering leasing more property in Vancouver when the 40,000 square feet in Burnaby "has been vacant for four years."

He said it was essential that the committee learn about all Hydro holdings because the corporation recently announced its intention to build a $67-million head office tower in Vancouver.

Macdonald wanted to know why the power authority had leased space at three locations on Howe Street, Vancouver, when the former office building of Dominion Bridge, bought by Hydro in 1974, remains empty.

Outside the committee hearing, Macdonald said "we just have to find out if Hydro is looking after the taxpayers' dollars. I find it shocking that they have 40,000 square feet in Burnaby that has been unused for four years."

He suggested that Hydro's staff might be able to make better use of existing floor space if it worked a shift system.

"Hydro has 360,000 square feet in its head office now," he said. "It is quite conceivable that if they went to shift work that floor space would be better utilized. And it is also quite conceivable that many employees would like to work shift work.

"If the employees so desire, then there could be a great saving of taxpayers' money."

Earlier in the hearing Vic Stephens (C—Oak Bay), making his first appearance on the committee after three months of exclusion, suffered his first rebuff.

Stephens asked that all persons giving evidence to the committee should be under oath.

Veitch said the Stephens motion should be tabled until he could obtain a ruling from authorities as to whether witnesses appering before a legislative committee are automatically sworn to tell the truth.

Weniger
...protested conviction

Battling nun sets herself afire

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A Swiss woman who belonged to an Indian-based spiritual organization burned herself to death in a downtown park Tuesday night to protest the conviction of two Americans for stabbing an Indian diplomat.

The woman, identified as Elizabeth Weniger, 26, was a member of the Ananda Marga movement, which claims an international following of eight million. Members of the group said she had lived near Zurich before coming to Manila last December to work as a nun.

Witnesses said Miss Weniger, dressed in an orange gown and sandals, strolled about the seaside Rizal Park carrying a can of gasoline and distributing leaflets to passers-by.

She then stepped behind the monument to Filipino patriot Jose Rizal, sat down, crossed her legs, doused herself with gasoline and struck a match.

Horrified onlookers tried unsuccessfully to put out the flames with water and soft drinks.

In her leaflet, Miss Weniger said she believed the two Americans — Stephen Michael Dwyer, 31, and Victoria Sheppard, 32 — had been charged falsely.

They were convicted May 25 of attempted murder for stabbing and wounding an Indian diplomat in Manila Feb. 7 and sentenced to a maximum jail term of 17 years and 4 months.

Friends said Miss Weniger shared a room at an Ananda Marga house with Miss Sheppard. They said the two had discussed plans to stage a campaign on behalf of the two Americans, who are out on bail, the day before she burned herself.

"She did it for them," said Acharya Tapesvara, an Ananda Marga official. "It was a protest."

In her leaflet, Miss Weniger said her self-immolation was a "completely individual action" intended to draw international attention and support for Ananda Marga. She described the Anada Marga as a "spiritual and humanitarian movement."

Judge Onofre Villaluz, who sentenced Dwyer and Miss Sheppard, called the group a communist-inspired "terrorist" organization and recommended the defence department investigate it to determine if it should be outlawed as a security risk.

Albertan in Russia hunted

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian external affairs department is trying to locate a Lithuanian-born Alberta farmer who did not return on schedule Monday from a visit to the Soviet Union.

Steve Paplauskas, 63, a retired farmer from Westlock, 70 kilometres north of Edmonton, left last month for a 22-day tour of the Soviet Union to visit relatives in Vilnius, a city west of Minsk.

The other nine members of his tour group returned on schedule to Montreal on Monday but Paplauskas was not with them.

Gertrade Paplauskas said her husband was able to see his three brothers and a sister in Vilnius. He tried to phone her from there but the line was disconnected before she had a chance to speak with him.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Plant scientists have been engaged for many years in making detailed studies into the effect of changing environment upon plant life.

Volumes have been written on the effect of temperature changes, moisture and light conditions, but to the best of my knowledge, no experimental institute has ever made a study of the effect of fire upon plant life.

Fire is a strange element. It is a destroying medium, particularly toward anything with living tissue, and yet, curiously, it will at times revitalize or even start into growth certain plants and seeds which have come into contact wih its searing heat.

We did a proper clean-up on one part of our garden early this spring, and to dispose of a vast amount of rubbish, roots, prunings, worn-out shrubs and similar litter, we had a bonfire going almost constantly for the best part of a week.

And, as we are always pressed for garden space, we decided to build our fire on the site of an old, long-established colony of old-fashioned Lemon Day Lilies which had been earmarked for replacement with some of the more modern and colorful varieties.

The Day Lillies hadn't come up at the time we made our fire, but we figured the heat would kill the roots and sterilize the soil on the site so it would be ready for replanting.

Several weeks after our bonfire, a strange thing happened. Through the ashy debris there came poking up a few struggling shoots, unmistakably those of the Day Lily which, in spite of everything, had survived the baking heat of the bonfire.

We hadn't the heart to dig up and discard the roots after that gallant struggle for survival, and today that colony has 26 strong flowering stems. The foliage is in grand, healthy condition and the flowers, as the buds open, are bigger and better than ever before. Altogether, these are much improved plants as a result of their ordeal.

Just why this should be so, I don't quite know, I suspect, though, that quite a few of our common garden plants may be suffering from obscure and unknown virus infections — not severe enough to show any noticeable symptoms but enough to make for under-par performance.

After a time, we come to look upon this slightly subnormal growth and flowering as the normal habit of the plant, and a truly healthy plant appears super-vigorous in comparison.

It is possible that my amazingly healthy and revitalized Day Lilies may be cleansed and virus-free for the first time in years as a result of that bonfire.

I think all of us have noticed how our common Fireweed springs up in burned-over wooded areas and along railway lines where slash has been burnt — this is probably why the plant is called Fireweed.

I believe the seeds must lie dormant in the soil awaiting the touch of fire, and the plant's function in nature's scheme of things is to spread the first healing cover over the scorched earth.

I read somewhere, too, that in California the seeds of the lovely Tree Poppy, ordinarily very difficult to germinate, spring up in great numbers after a brush fire has passed over.

In our garden, our peonies have benefitted considerably since we started making a quick flash fire over each clump after the top growth has died in the fall. We heap an armful of dry straw or excelsior over a plant and touch a match to it, and as a result, we haven't had a single peony flower bud dry up or rot through botrytis disease.

Our small mint patch, too, is maintained free from the crippling mint rust by burning it over every year in the fall.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — "Knock, knock."

"Who's there?"

"The police."

"The police who?"

"The police with a warrant to go through your files and notes and photos to see if you have any evidence that might help us catch a criminal."

"I don't believe it."

"Oh, you don't, huh? Well, just read the Supreme Court ruling written by Justice Byron White in a 5 to 3 decision. It says you newspaper people have no more protection than anyone else."

"What are you looking for?"

"A little of this, a little of that. You never know what you can find in a newspaper office."

"But if you can go through our files and notes, nobody will be willing to blow the whistle on crooked politicians, waste in government and violations of the constitution."

"That's right. So open the door before we break it down."

"Wait. It goes deeper than that. Many of our sources are willing to talk to us about crimes that have been committed. If they realize their identities can be revealed, they'll clam up, and then you people will never be able to arrest the guilty parties."

"Maybe so. But you guys have been getting a free ride on the First Amendment for too long. This will stop you meddling in the government's business, once and for all."

"What are you throwing all those photos on the floor for?"

"We want to see if you have any pictures of cops beating up demonstrators."

"Why?"

"Because we want the pictures of the demonstrators. A lot of them got away when we were beating up the ones who didn't."

"But people are allowed to demonstrate. It's in the constitution."

"Tell that to the Supreme Court. After we get through these photos we want every reporter to turn over his notebook. We want to know who he or she talked to and when."

"But that's a fishing expedition. Tell us what you're looking for."

"We must know who told you people that the judge was taking bribes from the mob."

"What judge?"

"The judge who issued this warrant, dummy. Once we find the guy who was singing he'll be held in contempt of court."

"But that judge is part of the political machine in this town."

"That's right, and we want to see everything you have on the machine. We want names of people who have been trying to get the machine, and addresses, too."

"What else do you want?"

"You know the bridge that collapsed last week? Somebody told your paper that the contractor had put in cheap cement which made it collapse."

"You want the name of the contractor?"

"No, we want the name of the guy who ratted on the company that built the bridge."

"Why don't you find out for yourselves?"

"We don't have to, when we can come here."

"Knock, knock."

"Who's there?"

"The FBI."

"What do you guys want?"

"What have you got?"

Rationalists who deplore the "mysticism" in all religions would do well to ponder the words of Arthur Balfour, the British philosopher-statesman, who said: "A religion that is small enough for our understanding would not be large enough for our needs."

By far, in my opinion, the best headstart a man can get in life is a father he can respect and care for; almost all villains in history, big or small, lacked such a model from their early years on. (It is no accident that Caesar, Nero, and Hitler, among others, all were deprived of such father-figures.)

It's hard to conceive that there weren't any real restaurants until the 16th century, and that until then you had to take a room at an inn in order to get a meal away from home. (This is one reason that "hospitality" ranked as a prime virtue in ancient and medieval times.)

Stuart Rosenberg

Young people are misjudged by most adults. Grown-ups expect them to be different from them in at least two ways in which they cannot be different. The popular postulate assumes that "young people, today, are not what they used to be"; it also suggests that "youth is a time of rebellion." The truth, however, is in the opposite direction. Today, as always before, young people are miniature adults — they soak up all of the peeves and prejudices, reflect most of the attitudes of their elders. Far from being rowdy rebels, they are notorious conformists and imitators; if this were not so, there would be no Pied Pipers, no rock-and-roll Kings, and precious few disc-jockeys.

The attitudes of young people toward the social, economic, political and religious questions of our times are the same attitudes of most people — young and old. The prevailing winds blow; they touch us all alike, sowing careless disregard for the number of hairs on our heads, or the years we have lived. Somehow we like to deceive ourselves into the belief that "we were different in our day," from the young people these days. This is just not so! We were different, yes: but only because our parents were different, too — only because we reflected, as all young people must reflect, the dominant value-judgments of our own era.

Everyone, except those who work intimately with young people, seems shocked to discover that youngsters are not automatically rebellious, just because they are young. Far from it. By their nature, they may seek to obtain more privileges and freedom, for themselves. But there is abundant evidence to indicate that many teenagers who demand more liberties are, in fact, frightened by the very prospects of freedom. They are not quite sure how to handle it.

Thus, parents falsely assume that they are being most understanding when they exercise the least amount of control; then, they must imagine, there will be less to rebel against. But young people do want, need and respect authority. For themselves, they will seek to gain certain specific free areas of activity. But, as an attitude toward life in general, they feel much more comfortable in a world where there is obedience and respect for authority. Not unlike their elders, by the way.

When men grow grey, they romanticize the "good old days." Part of that nostalgia is due to the physical frustrations of age — when "the grinders cease because they are few" — which they contrast with the power and vitality of more youthful days. Weaker, older men were once more physically sound, and they like to believe that they were once more spiritually vigorous, as well. Youth has thus become the ideal age — and we have imagined that it is also the age of idealism. But with notably few exceptions, youth can grow no wings in an earthbound society. As in all other things, they do not live like Robinson Crusoes; they are very much part of the world they populate. Where men become islands unto themselves, and the drive for security the chief consciously-desired human goal, youth can never, any more than their parents can, become part of the continent.

If there is confusion among our youth, it is the result of the lack of guidance on the part of parents. For the blind will never lead the blind.!

Barred from bars, woman plans to fight on

MOUNT VERNON, WASH. (AP) — The jury decided it could return no verdict on Margaret Willoughby Archer's banishment from local bars, but the 27-year-old mother of two wants to continue fighting her case.

"The wrong is still there," Mrs. Archer said after a Skagit county superior court jury could not arrive at a verdict on her suit against owners of several Anacortes bars and restaurants.

Judge Walter Deierlein declared a mistrial late Monday, about eight hours after the case went to the six-man, six-woman jury.

"I'm still going to defend my name and what happened to me," Mrs. Archer said. "I'm sorry the jury believed the lies that were told."

She expected her lawyers would refile the suit soon.

Mrs. Archer claimed her civil rights and right to privacy were violated when she was declared persona non grata in 1974 by restaurant and tavern owners who said her husband at the time was a rowdy troublemaker.

Superwoman is unrealistic

TORONTO (CP) — Superwoman belongs in the comics—not as a model for today's working mother, a Toronto physician says.

Dr. Gail Robinson, director of post-graduate education for the Toronto General Hospital's psychiatry department, said Tuesday that too many career women feel they also must be the perfect wife, mother, housekeeper and hostess.

Since this is impossible, the woman ends up feeling like a failure, said Dr. Robinson, herself a wife and mother of two pre-schoolers.

She told the Association of Women Executives that pride should not interfere with a woman taking a few shortcuts.

"If you're exhausted from work and your love life's suffering, it's much better to order in Chinese food and save your energy" she said.

Papers not destroyed, Nazi survivors lose out

Hitler's files stay to haunt

BERLIN (UPI) — When Adolf Hitler finally realized he had lost, he took steps to deny himself and his Nazi party files to the enemy.

Hitler instructed the staff at Nazi party headquarters on Koenigsplatz in Munich to destroy all membership and other files.

Then the Fuehrer withdrew to his underground bunker in Berlin and killed himself. To make doubly sure he would not fall into enemy hands he left orders that aides burn his body.

His Munich staff was much less efficient, a fact many a Nazi survivor has come to regret.

On April 30, 1945, the day Hitler died in Berlin, the first American soldier to reach Munich, Sgt. Ernie Langendorf, walked into the Koenigsplatz headquarters and found the files only partly burned. There was evidence other files had been removed from the building.

Maj. William Browne, of Portland, Ore., then with the U.S. Military Government, took the suggestion of a German adviser and searched pulping mills in the area. In July his raiders hit the jackpot at a mill operated by Hans Huber, who said he had been given 40 tons of Nazi documents to pulp but had not done so because his brother had been forced to flee the country on the grounds he had a Jewish wife.

Huber said he had been trying without success to convince American officers passing through his community that he was sitting on probably the most important Nazi documents the occupation would discover — the master membership list with more than 10 million name cards.

At about the same time another American army unit came upon a train abandoned on a siding in Northern Bavaria. It contained the files of the Nazi supreme court involving appeals from lower courts in cases of infractions of party regulations and contested membership.

The army shipped all these files to its documents centre in Berlin which also received about 600,000 SS membership cards, 200,000 SA membership cards and the files of the notorious People's Courts which tried violations of the Nazis' racial code of treason.

Millions of pieces of Nazi organization correspondence and files on those who became German citizens as the Nazi empire expanded were added to the huge collection.

"We have between 25 and 30 million records in here," says Dan Simon, the retired U.S. officer who has directed the documents centre for the last three years.

With Nazis on the run or trying to hide their past, the files they kept until too late to destroy proved invaluable, both to the occupation forces and later to the Germans trying to create a new democratic state.

The files contain no evidence of a crime as such, but they do reveal a man's rank and assignment at any given time and often that is the key that opens the rest of a case against a Nazi war criminal or murderer.

The U.S. state department, which has operated the centre since 1952 restricts access to the files to friendly western governments and bona fide scholars only. Private feuds find no comfort here.

The files are a gold mine of Nazi peculiarities.

Heinrich Himmler, head of the SS, turns out to have been a master padder of expense accounts. Not only did he carefully list all of the tips he or his wife allegedly gave hotel or sleeping car porters and taxi drivers, he also billed the SS for the special tutoring his daughter required.

Leni Riefenstahl, who never joined the Nazi party but made several films glorifying Hitler, used her influence whenever anyone crossed her.

SFU man measures prehistory

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A nuclear physicist at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C., says he and a research team are working on a new technique for determining the age of ancient once-living things.

Erle Nelson said in an interview here that the new dating method allows more sensitive measurement and will permit much more reliable results than the present method, known as radioactive carbon dating.

Carbon dating, which measures the residue of carbon 14, a natural radioactive isotope in every living organism, is capable of dating only as far back as 50,000 to 60,000 years.

Nelson said archeological researchers would like to date things between 60,000 and 100,000 years old, the period of the last major ice age.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Quebecers terrorized

Towns break bikers' reign

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — A police commission inquiry into organized crime in Quebec will reveal a reign of terror by the Black Spiders motorcycle gang, commission lawyers said Wednesday.

Jean-Francois Dionne told the opening session of the probe that 16 gang members "systematically terrorized St. Michel de Bellechase and Montmagny, intimidating the residents through a reign of terror."

Marchand
. . . dredging case

Judge Denys Dionne, chairman of the three-member commission, was told all gang members had been identified and five were in police custody facing murder charges.

Ten members operated out of a private home in St. Michel, 20 miles east of Quebec City, and six others from Montmagny, a nearby community.

Investigators told the commission they will explain in the next 10 days the gang's implication in a drug ring, intimidation, protection and the beating and rapes of teenage girls.

Police said the 1,000 residents of St. Michel were "too nervous to walk the streets" during the Black Spiders reign, which ended once the police investigation began last February. Lawyer Dionne told the hearing the town's social and economic development "was completely halted by the gang's presence."

"The Black Spiders are a very well organized gang," said Constable Tony Trudel of the Quebec provincial force. "Their two main codes are that of silence and loyalty."

Twenty-two witnesses are to testify during the hearings, several behind closed doors "to protect their and their families identity," Judge Dionne said.

Lawyer Dionne expected other communities to benefit from the St. Michel and Montmagny experiences, preventing similar gangs from settling down. He said the Black Spiders had drifted through many cities and towns before selecting the two municipalities seven years ago.

Once Montmagny residents realized a police investigation was under way, they raided the gang's headquarters, wrecking the dwelling and forcing the gang to move out of the building.

SENATOR SUING PAPERS

MONTREAL (CP) — Senator Jean Marchand has filed two $100,000 libels suits here against Montreal Star Ltd. and Le Journal de Montreal, claiming in his action that both newspapers implicated him through "malicious interpretations" of testimony at the dredging contracts trial in Toronto last March.

Marchand alleged in his Superior Court action Wednesday that both papers published stories March 14 which contained falsehoods and suggested he was guilty of a criminal act.

The dredging affair involved 11 company executives and nine companies charged with defrauding the federal and Ontario governments and the Hamilton and Toronto harbor commissioners of $4.2 million.

Sprayers poised over Okanagan

PENTICTON (CP) — Provincial government crews are ready to begin applying the herbicide 2,4-D to Okanagan Lakes to combat Eurasian milfoil weed as soon as the pesticide control board approves permits, Peter Scales, spokesmam for the water investigations branch said Wednesday.

Scales said, however, application would be delayed two weeks while local residents were warned of the applications and alternative water supplies were arranged.

The board completed more than a week of hearings Wednesday during which it heard from several scientists and environmental groups opposing use of the herbicide because of its potential health hazards.

During Tuesday's hearings, Dr. Charles Huver, a biologist at the University of Minnesota, said 2,4-D could create greater problems than the milfoil weed itself.

He said removing the milfoil could cause changes in the Okanagan Lakes ecosystem that would spawn an algae form far more troublesome and difficult to control than the weed.

He also said not enough study has been done on possible chromosone damage to humans and plants caused by the herbicide.

As well, Huver said a ministry of environment advisory committee report on the herbicide could not be accepted by the scientific community because it failed to acknowledge advances in the study of 2,4-D.

10-year-old captured

ZAMBOANGA CITY, Philippines (AP) — A 10-year-old boy has been captured while fighting on the side of Moslem separatists in the southern Philippines. An army communique released in this city, 880 kilometres south of Manila, says the boy—the youngest insurgent to be captured during the five-year war against separatists—apparently had been abandoned by his comrades after a battle against government troops.

China, Japan end impasse

TOKYO (AP) — China has agreed to resume negotiations with Japan on a peace and friendship treaty, Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda told the Japanese parliament. The negotiations have been stalled since September 1975.

Big names in TV dazzler

OTTAWA (CP) — Teen-age singing star Rene Simard will once again join a cast of well-known Canadian entertainers in a two-hour national television extravaganza broadcast Dominion Day from Parliament Hill.

Other big-name artists to appear in the $365,000 show include blues singer Salome Bey, country and western singers Tommy Hunter and Murray McLaughlan, the Irish Rovers, opera star Maureen Forrester and French-Canadian pop singers Jean-Pierre Ferland and Diane Juster.

The show, similar in style to the one last year which attracted an estimated eight million French- and English-speaking television viewers, will feature more than 200 performers and be the culmination of week-long national festivities costing more than $4.5 million.

Officials at Festival Canada, the federally-financed agency overseeing Canada Week festivities, refused Tuesday to discuss plans for the television show. Details were to be announced later this week, despite the leak of the names of the headliners to some news organizations.

There had been reports Festival Canada was experiencing difficulty in finding Quebecois entertainers to appear in the show.

Pop singers Robert Charlegois and Diane Dufresne—two of the biggest names in the Quebec pop music industry—refused to participate, partially for political reasons.

The Quebecers who will appear on Parliament Hill July 1 generally inject fewer Quebec nationalistic sentiments into songs and interviews than do Miss Dufresne and Charlebois.

Simard is a native Quebecer who gained widespread fame in that province and abroad before gaining much popularity in English-Canada singing everything from hymns to innocent pop tunes. He now has his own television show in English.

Simard sang and danced on the Parliament Hill stage last July 1 as a cloudburst sent thousands among the audience dashing for cover.

Ferland is noted for his romantic, sentimental ballads and Miss Juster for bouncy, rock recordings.

G. Hamilton Southam, head of Festival Canada, has refused to comment on reports that Gordon Lightfoot and Anne Murray—two of English-Canada's most commercially successful singers—refused to appear in the television show.

South African dilemma

Race law splits couple

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Erhard Klose, a German-born white South African, said Wednesday he still loved his mulatto girlfriend with whom he has lived for eight years although a judge ordered them to separate or go to jail.

A South African judge found Klose guilty of "conspiring to commit sexual intercourse" with his non-white lover of eight years, and ordered them to separate.

The judge sentenced both to six months in jail but suspended it for three years provided they do not violate the law again. They were convicted of violating the Immorality Act which makes sexual intercourse across racial lines a crime.

"I don't know what I am going to do," Klose said Wednesday. "It really hasn't sunk in yet."

He said they had wanted to marry but decided to live together because they thought it would reduce the risk of being arrested.

"All hope of a meaningful relationship has been destroyed," he said. "With the threat of a suspended sentence over one's head what can one do?"

Klose said he met his girlfriend in 1970 when she was working as a shop assistant and immediately fell in love with her.

He said he planned to take her out of the country where they could live in peace but it would take several years before he could save the money to go.

"I still love her now," he said. "It's a cruel law that can part two people who love each other."

The Theron Committee, an official government appointed board of inquiry into ways of improving white-colored relations, suggested in 1976 the scrapping of laws barring sex and marriage across color lines.

The government accepted many of the committee's findings but not those affecting sexual relationships between racial groups. In rejecting the findings, the government said children of mixed marriages were generally not accepted into the society of either parent.

During 1976, 351 persons were prosecuted for violating these laws, an increase over the 325 prosecutions brought in 1975. In 1976, 260 suspects were found guilty compared with 199 the year before. Figures for 1977 are not available.

Names in the News

God up front for Trudeau

Prime Minister Trudeau set politics aside Wednesday and spent 40 minutes in Ottawa discussing God and the international state of religion with evangelist Billy Graham. Did you talk about God, a reporter asked as Graham left a morning meeting in Trudeau's office that lasted twice as long as scheduled. "That was the only topic of conversation," replied the 60-year-old American preacher.

King Juan Carlos and his wife Queen Sofia left Madrid on Wednesday for China in a new effort to widen Spain's post-Franco image abroad. The 10-day trip includes stops in Iran and Iraq and is the first by a Spanish head of state to China. The royal couple are due to arrive in Peking Friday.

Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late president Dwight D. Eisenhower, thinks U.S. presidents should be limited to a single six-year term, and that the terms of congressmen should also be restricted. Eisenhower, president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University, made his remarks at the annual meeting in Baltimore of American University Presses.

White House sources say President Carter is using a tape recorder to improve his speechmaking style. The sources say the president began to worry about his delivery about six months ago. Now he records practice recitals of speech texts, both for timing and delivery.

For the first time in its 102-year history, McCall's magazine has decided to feature a man alone on its cover. The choice: John Travolta, star of Saturday Night Fever, and Grease. The cover shot on the women's magazine will coincide with an interview with Helen and Sam Travolta, the superstar's parents.

The showing of actress Vanessa Redgrave's controversial documentary, The Palestinian, at the Motion Picture Academy's theatre in Los Angeles was cancelled, Academy president Howard Koch announced Wednesday. Koch said, the Friday showing of the pro-Palestinian film, which some Jewish groups have called anti-Israeli, was cancelled because tickets were being sold without the necessary commercial licence.

New Jersey Teamster leader Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano and Harold (Boom Boom) Konigsberg were found guilty of murder in Kingston, N.Y., in the 1961 killing of union rival Anthony (Three Fingers) Castellito. The jurors apparently chose to believe the informant-witnesses, including one who said he helped strangle Castellito, even though the victim's body had never been found.

H. R. Haldeman, whose reported loyalty to Richard Nixon shattered in the backlash of Watergate, will be paroled from Lompoc, Calif., prison on Dec. 20 after serving 18 months of a four-year sentence for obstruction of justice and perjury.

Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali left Moscow on Wednesday for Tashkent, in the heart of Soviet Central Asia, to continue his 12-day tour of the Soviet Union. When they come back to Moscow on Sunday, Ali is scheduled to fight two exhibition bouts with Russian boxers, and sellout crowds are expected.

First-in tallship spruces up after Pacific 'rampage'

Two giant Japanese sail training ships became first of a number of tallships to visit Victoria when they pulled into Royal Roads Wednesday morning after a 38-day voyage from Tokyo. Captains Nakazawa Hiroshi of Nippon Maru and Ichihara Yoshizo, of Kaiwo Maru, said in joint statement on arrival that sister ships suffered "sea rampage" for most of voyage to Victoria. Won't make farmers scapegoats—Chretien

Food soars but Liberals standing pat

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the government sympathizes with consumers for having to cope with the largest food price increases in six years but there are no policy changes aimed at meeting the problem.

Trudeau and Finance Minister Jean Chretien, facing a barrage of opposition complaints in the Commons, said farmers will not be made the scapegoat for inflation.

The opposition attack came after Statistics Canada released figures showing that food prices rose by 3.3 per cent in May, the highest increases since July, 1972, while the cost of living overall jumped by 1.4 per cent, the largest rise since July, 1975. The 12-month inflation rate last month was nine per cent.

Higher prices for beef, up 10.3 per cent in a month, and for fresh vegetables, up 22.2 per cent, led the way.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, pressing for policy changes to deal with inflation, noted that the nine-per-cent rate was more than double original anti-inflation targets of four per cent for 1978, and above the revised estimate in the April 10 budget of seven per cent.

It was clear government policy was failing, Clark added.

Chretien said he is "disappointed" with the results. He attributed the increase in the price of beef to normal sup-

'Heartless solution' for buyers

REGINA (CP) — Suggesting that consumers suffer higher beef prices while producers recoup their losses of recent years is "a heartless solution to the problem," the Consumers Association of Canada said Wednesday.

Barbra Sulzenko, director of public issues, said association committees met to discuss the issue after it was raised at the annual meeting Tuesday.

Guest speaker Dr. C. M. Williams of the University of Saskatchewan urged the association not to take a stand against higher beef prices.

Sulzenko said the association considers it "unacceptable that consumers should have to pay for producer losses."

Instead, there should be direct assistance from government and government policies to alleviate the problem, she said. The group also suggested a government-producer fund to stabilize incomes for beef producers.

She said the group also is concerned that high-protein vegetables which might be used as beef substitutes are too expensive for low-income consumers.

"We do not have any concrete solutions to the problem, but action must be taken to improve the current supply and demand imbalance, especially since it has become clear that processors and retailers have been cashing in on the producer increases by raising their own margins," Sulzenko said.

"Since import controls were put in place the help producers when prices were low, perhaps export controls should be considered as a short-term measure to help consumers."

'ZOMBIES' ADMITTED BY LEGION

EDMONTON (CP) — Delegates to the Royal Canadian Legion's national convention voted by a narrow margin Wednesday to allow certain conscripted war veterans into the organization.

Voting on a what has been a contentious issue for years, the Legion decided to allow membership to men known disparagingly as zombies—conscripted veterans who served only in Canada.

Conscripts who had served overseas already were eligible.

One official guessed the resolution might affect about 100,000 veterans, but Colin Graham of Montreal, a Legion administrator, said it is unlikely many of the conscripts will seek membership.

About 3,500 delegates are attending the convention which ends today.

Millions pledged to Zaire

BRUSSELS (AP) — Delegates of Western nations pledged $116 million in emergency aid Wednesday for economically crippled Zaire. Diplomats said the supplies could begin flowing almost immediately after the pledges are approved by the participating governments.

In Paris, France announced the withdrawal of the last of its troops sent into Zaire last month to help defeat an invasion by rebel tribesmen in Shaba province and aid in the evacuation of foreigners.

The promises of food and medical assistance were made by technical representatives of most of the 10 countries and the European common market that met Tuesday and Wednesday. They reached agreement in principle on a $1 billion plan to restore the economy and finances of Zaire.

Burnaby sniper hits two women

BURNABY (CP) — Police were searching for two armed teen-aged boys Wednesday night after a sniping incident in which two women were wounded within an hour at the same intersection.

Police said Gwyneth Mary Clandinin, 65, was shot in the upper back while crossing the street to a bus stop at Boundary Road and Hastings.

A short time later, Holly Ann Edwards, 18, was shot in the head while walking though the area. She was in serious but stable condition in hospital, while the older woman was treated and released.

Four bullets were also fired into the rear of a parked car in the area.

40-rider forest bill nettles NDP

Forests Minister Tom Waterland introduced 40 amendments to his new Forests Act Wednesday as the Legislature began second-reading debate.

The move brought instant criticism from Opposition forests critic William King (NDP—Revelstoke-Slocan), who said it was typical of government arrogance to make so many changes and then expect intelligent debate.

"These are amendments which, for all we know, may be good," King said outside the house.

"But for heaven's sake, we should be allowed a couple of days to take a look at them before we are forced into debate. How can we possibly understand the significance of the amendments until we have had a chance to look at them."

Waterland's claim that the amendments were basically of a "housekeeping nature" did not satisfy King.

King said the only praise given the new proposals had come from the Council of Forest Industries "and I would suggest there was a good reason for that." CFI is an organization representing major forest companies.

Waterland ignored the criticism.

"Some self-interest groups have clamored for wholesale redistribution of tenure rights," he said. "Neither the government, nor the (Pearse Commission) recommended this, nor is there any valid reason to do so.

"The objective is to achieve good management through tenure security, not to impede good management through chaotic disruption of employment, communities.

England discovered!

DOVER, England (Reuter) — A crew of Hawaiians paddled their traditional outrigger canoe across the English Channel from France Wednesday to mark the 200th anniversary of the discovery of the Hawaiian Islands by British explorer Captain James Cook.

The 40-foot outrigger was to be taken to Cook's birthplace, Middlesbrough, and placed in the new Cook museum.

Follow the rest of us, PM urges Levesque

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has asked Quebec Premier Rene Levesque to join other premiers and "the vast majority of Canadians" in support of the federal government's latest proposals for constitutional reform.

In a letter released Wednesday—parallel letters were sent to the other nine premiers—Trudeau urged the independence-minded Quebec premier to "make an honest assessment" of proposals released Monday that would give the country a new constitution by the end of 1981.

Levesque has already dismissed the suggestions as "profoundly insignificant."

The Trudeau letters ask the premiers to agree to meet within two weeks with federal ministers, being dispatched from Ottawa to discuss the proposed changes. Marc Lalonde, minister of federal-provincial relations, has been assigned to meet Levesque.

Trudeau says he is not asking the Quebec government to "participate in a renewal of some sort of status quo."

Instead, the prime minister says he wants the Parti Quebecois government to "join in the revitalization, renewal and revival of the Canadian adventure."

Downed pilot kills self

DAWSON CITY, Yukon (CP) — RCMP say a helicopter pilot who shot himself in the head after his machine ran out of fuel while he was lost in the wilderness probably committed suicide because he felt disgraced.

A police spokesman said Tuesday that Donald Garland, 30, killed himself after his craft crashed Saturday about 32 kilometres southwest of here while on a mineral exploration trip.

*

Garland and one of his passengers, Robert Gerlock, were uninjured in the crash. A second passenger, Paul Brizins, suffered a minor back injury.

The police spokesman said Garland "apparently felt he could not get another flying job in the north after getting lost and allowing his copter to run out of gas."

Testers tag 2 compacts 'frightening'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group has labeled as unsafe the Dodge Omni and the Plymouth Horizon, two similar Chrysler Corp. models that won Motor Trend magazine's Car of the Year designation.

Consumers Union, a non-profit testing organization, said it is publishing an article in its July issue of Consumer Reports, titled "Most Unfortunate Car of the Year," giving the sub-compact, front-wheel-drive Omni and Horizon its first unacceptable ratings in a decade.

At news conferences in Washington and New York, Consumers Union officials said the cars were found unacceptable because of handling problems.

Don Gohwind, director of chassis engineering for Chrysler, met reporters on the sidewalk coming out of the Washington news conference and said the test used by Consumers Union "has no relationship to the way consumers drive a car."

He acknowledged that Chrysler put the cars through the same test, but it was only one of many. "By itself, it has no meaning."

At the news conferences, Consumers Union showed films of a test in which the car was driven at expressway speed and then deflected suddenly from a straight path.

"The deflection is accomplished by twitching the steering wheel and letting go. From that point, without aid of the driver, most cars straighten themselves with a minimum of wavering from side to side and return close to their previous course," said Mark Silbergeld, director of the organization's Washington office.

Silbergeld said the performance of the Omni and Horizon in the tests "was often frightening." After test drivers released the wheel on each of three samples, "the car veered from side to side. Sometimes each swing was wider and more violent than the one before."

He said the average consumer does not have the driving skill to control the car in such circumstances.

GM RECALLING 600,000 CARS, TRUCKS

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. said Wednesday it is recalling nearly 600,000 cars and trucks — about 23,000 of them in Canada — some with fan blades that could crack and fly off and others with defective rear axles that could result in the loss of a wheel.

A GM spokesman said at least 15 persons have been injured in accidents resulting from the rear-axle flaw.

The fan blade recall involves 333,000 1978 Buick, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars and El Camino and GMC Caballero trucks equipped with 196-cubic-inch and 231-cubic-inch Buick V-6 engines, 350-cubic-inch Buick V-8 engines and 301-cubic-inch Pontiac V-8 engines.

RCMP: 'IT'S ORGANIZED TERRORISM ITSELF'

OTTAWA (CP) — A former Quebec terrorist Wednesday accused the RCMP of being "organized terrorism itself" and of continuing to harass him and his wife for crimes he committed more than 15 years ago.

"You have to draw the line," Jean Castonguay, 36, said just before leaving the witness stand after a day of testimony before the McDonald royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

"My wife, myself and my two cats have been harassed since 1968 . . . I just want to live a normal life, lovingly, peacefully."

Castonguay was released from jail in 1968 after serving four years for possession of dynamite and attempted armed robbery. But he said he had had no involvement with terrorism since then.

He was appearing before the commission to tell about an incident in October, 1971, when he was approached by the Mounties and asked to become an informer. But he said he had a few things to add.

Castonguay told the commission that he was imprisoned for 12 days during the October Crisis in Quebec in 1970 and his wife had been jailed for eight days.

He said the RCMP was created as the North West Mounted Police in 1873 "to murder francophones in Western Canada."

"I am accusing the RCMP for being organized terrorism itself," he said.

The commission chairman, Alberta Supreme Court Justice David McDonald, told Castonguay that if he had any evidence to back up such charges, he should present it to commission lawyer Ross Goddwin.

Castonguay said he hoped that a parallel Quebec inquiry into the RCMP, temporarily stalled because of a court challenge by the federal government, would get started again. The real story about the RCMP would come out there, not at the McDonald inquiry, he said.

Earlier, Castonguay asked the commission to observe one minute of silence for "political prisoners" being held in federal prisons in Quebec.

Castonguay
...'have to draw line'

He said thousands of Quebecers would demonstrate for the unconditional release of the prisoners, some of whom have been held in prison for 14 years.

McDonald said Castonguay could mark the occasion if he wished.

Castonguay earlier answered the questions about his past from RCMP lawyer Pierre Lamontagne, who earlier had called him "a liar" and insisted that the commission must hear details of his past.

The demand split the commission. McDonald and commissioner Donald Rickerd of Toronto allowed the questions but commissioner Guy Gilbert of Montreal and commission counsel Ross Goodwin questioned their relevance.

The argument over Lamontagne's questions came because Castonguay's testimony was not contradictory to that of two RCMP officers who appeared before the commission last month. He reiterated their testimony that they had stopped him Oct. 20, 1971, as he returned from work, took him for a coffee, and tried to recruit him as an informer. He told them he wasn't interested but agreed to meet them a few days later. He did so, telling them again that he wasn't interested—that he had lost interest in 1968.

The Mounties had testified that Castonguay seemed apprehensive at the first meeting and that after the second, he asked permission to call his wife. They said they learned later that she was ready to send in Montreal police and a lawyer if he hadn't called.

Castonguay said he thought he was going to be framed on a drug charge the first time he was picked up. He didn't know what the Mounties wanted.

He said that he did not feel free to leave the hotel room, where he was alone with two Mounties. This is an important issue for the inquiry, because questions of abduction arise. The Mounties have insisted that Castonguay and others they tried to recruit as informers were always free to leave.

Castonguay said he and a few other young men in their early 20s formed a group in 1963 after reading a radical paper advocating violence to end "slave-like conditions in Quebec."

"That's how it all began. We were young idealists. Naive. We decided to change the world. It was an ideal which was doomed to failure."

They were arrested a few hours after stealing some dynamite and in 1964, Castonguay was sent to prison for four years. He served the full sentence.

He denied that he continued his terrorist career when he was released in 1968. He said he travelled Quebec in 1969, trying to raise money for "political prisoners" still behind bars, but raised little.

Energy flicks

The centre for Energy Conservation with the co—operation of the National Film Board will be presenting a three—week noon—hour movie series from June 27 to July 13.

Movies will be shown on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week, starting at 12:05 each day at the NFB Theatre, 811 Wharf.

Subjects covered by the series include looks at Canada's energy usage and wastage; alternative energy technologies; some philosophical approaches to energy usage and choices and decisions to must make in an energy consuming society.

Canada is the highest per capita energy user in the world while Sweden, with roughly the same climate and level of technology, uses almost half the energy Canada does yet their living standard does not seem to be any lower.

Forest proposal 'threatening' B.C. well-being

Public interest groups representing a large number of British Columbians said Tuesday in Victoria that proposed forest legislation now before the Legislature is a threat to the well-being of the province.

The proposed Forest Act is based on political expediency with large corporations rather than basic management and harvesting priciples, about 15 groups from across the province said at a public meeting at The Empress.

A resolution was passed for the act to be tabled and amended, and at least three months allowed for public discussion.

Representing more than 100,000 persons, the groups, including the Victoria Labour Council, the Sierra Club, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, the West Coast Environmental Law Association and the Vancouver Women's Resource Centre said the act discriminates against small, independent loggers in favor of the large conglomerates, and should be amended because it does not face the silviculture and harvesting problems now facing the industry.

The meeting was told by Coalition for Responsible Forest Legislation spokesman Paul George that there was no real free enterprise system in the B.C. forest industry, and that "the real solution to the forest problem is to institute intensive silviculture immediately. Silviculture is not really mentioned in the legislation, it's under the miscellaneous column."

Coalition member Lyn Pinkerton said in an interview before the meeting that women in the province, particularly in the smaller towns in northern B.C., were concerned that the towns could shut down from overcutting and were therefore supporting amending the legislation.

William King (NDP—Revelstoke-Slocan), Opposition forest critic, said the proposed legislation was a "move toward private ownership of crown land, in effect."

King said he would like to see the government call the Legislature back in the fall to deal with the act, because "we think it's significant enough to the future of the province."

The act has come under increasing criticism because of clauses making forestry information secret and by its failure to define basic sustained yield or harvesting principles.

Colin Fraser, executive representative of the B.C. Independent Logging Association, representing nearly 1,000 firms and 10,000 workers in the province, did not support the resolution but told the meeting the proposed Forest Act "implies an increasing possibility for corporate concentration."

Native animal park proposed for Island

The recently-formed Vancouver Island Zoological Society is looking for public support for an animal park in the Greater Victoria-Nanaimo area.

The society started with the concept that a zoo should have no bars.

A walk-through or drive-through region of 600 to 700 acres, with North American, not exotic, animals and plants, is what the society sees as a possible animal park for Vancouver Island.

Urban dwellers are removed from their natural roots and a wildlife park would be educational, the society says.

Animals should not be confined, people should, it says.

"There's a whole history of bad zoos on the Island," a society spokesman said, adding that the best kind of zoo would not be a zoo at all but a park where animals moved freely within natural confines.

Council puzzles over pay

If Saanich Ald. Geoffrey Vantreight had his way, aldermen would receive a hefty pay raise as well as a cost-of-living clause and Mayor Mel Couvelier would be receiving more than a first class municipal police constable.

"It bothers me the mayor does not receive as much as a first class constable yet he works twice as many hours," Vantreight said Tuesday during a debate by council's finance committee.

Couvelier, who agreed to prepare a report on the issue later this year, said his request to local ratepayer groups for guidance on council pay brought replies from eight of the 10 and only one was willing to be involved.

"As my guidelines were for five nominees we must consider this avenue of solution closed," he said.

Nanaimo district

Directors may save mill jobs

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Regional District will move to try to save 35 jobs at a sawmill illegally located on agricultural reserve land by asking the B.C. Land Commission to grant the mill an extension before it is required to move.

REGIONAL directors decided Tuesday night that the advantages of allowing the Landmark Holdings Ltd. mill to stay at its present location in East Wellington until the end of this year outweighed the disadvantages.

The Land Commission will be asked to grant an extension to the mill and ask that the owners post a bond to guarantee that they will file a compliance plan at the end of October, outlining their plans for either moving or shutting down.

AL STEWART, the citizen who had asked the region to support the Land Commission's order that the mill shut down by June 30, told the board that the operation was an industrial use encroaching on a quiet rural neighborhood.

But, George Eversfield, president of Landmark Holdings, told the board that the mill was just an extension of the company's land clearing operations for farming and that it was planned to move the mill soon anyway.

Eversfield asked for the extension in order to give the mill managers time to find a new location and arrange financing for the move.

HE SAID that the company believes it has found a location north of Campbell River that is suitable and all but one of the mill employees has indicated they would like to make the move with the mill.

Stewart outlined the history of the mill to the regional board, saying that it was an illegal use, both because of the agricultural land reserve and because of the region's zoning.

He contended that the mill was not a small family operation, as Landmark Holdings had said, but had directors from out of the country.

EVERSFIELD, however, later reiterated his statement that the mill was a small family-type oeration and said that two of the directors, including himself, were non-Canadian.

Stewart also said that he understood that half of the mill's workers were "members of the religious sect that is represented by Landmark Holdings Ltd."

REGIONAL directors objected to Stewart's use of the religious issue.

Alex Virostko, director from the city of Nanaimo, said that he had visited the mill himself and had felt embarrassed by bringing it up, but did ask about the religious aspect.

He said he was told that only six of the 35 workers belonged to the same religious group and there was no religious requirement for working at the mill.

THE NAME of the religious group was not given.

Eversfield said that the religious question is only one of several rumors the mill has been subject to.

HE SAID that it was also rumored that a majority of the mill's employees were non-Canadian, while, in fact, every employee was Canadian, including five landed immigrants.

And, the allegation that the mill was working "some religious tax deal" was nonsense, he said.

He said the mill pays out $41,000 a month in wages and benefits.

FRINGE benefits include a hot lunch and two snacks daily for the employees, two weeks' paid holiday, insurance coverage, dental plan and the usual Workmen's Compensation and Unemployment Insurance coverage.

He said that the mill had originally been set up to use the lumber off the 100-acre farm that Landmark Holdings was clearing at that site.

They hoped to pay for the farm with money from the mill, he said.

HOWEVER, they soon discovered that they needed supplementary wood to keep the mill operating economically. He said the mill is located on a gravel deposit in the agricultural land.

The extension to Dec. 31 would allow the mill management time to relocate or to finish the land clearing at the farm and shut down, he said.

Regionl director for the area, Norm Hobson, said that the zoning bylaw for the area allows some uses similar to sawmilling, such as fence post and firewood cutting, and he contended that the sawmill should be an allowed use.

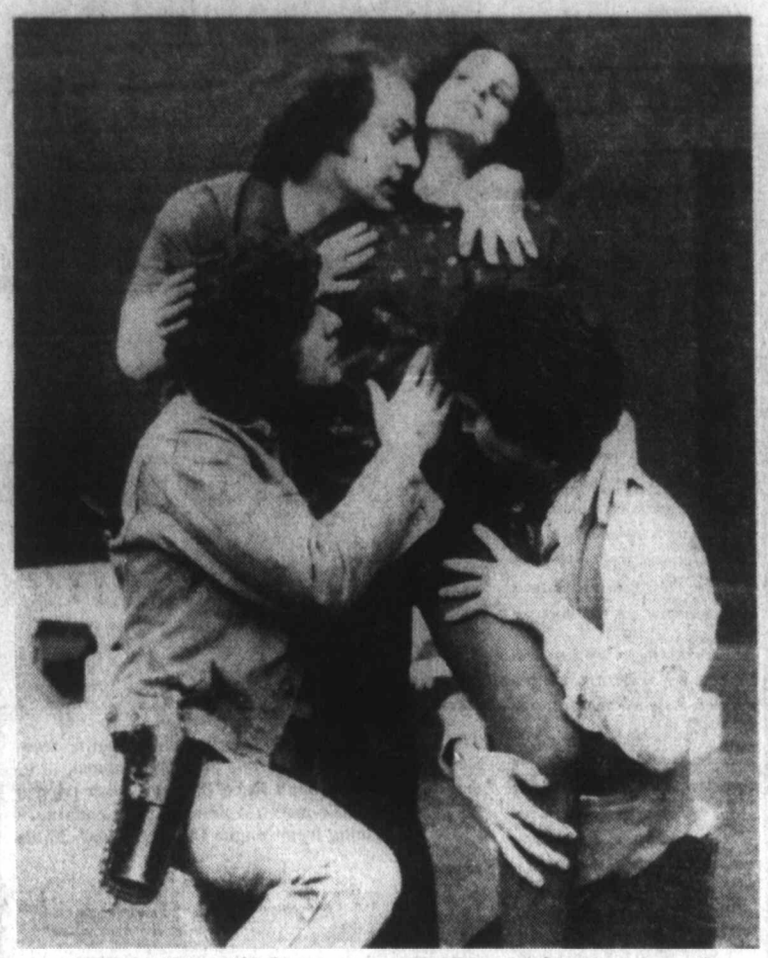
HE SAID that there is absolutey no evidence that the mill has adversely affected the agricultural capability of the land it is located on.

Nelson Allen, director from the city of Nanaimo, made the motion that the regional board write the Land Commission, saying the board does not object to the extension to Dec. 31.

Requiring the mill to file a compliance plan will give some guarantee that the board will not be faced with a similar crisis two weeks before the next deadline expires, he said.

NANAIMO director Ada Howden objected to the extension, saying that the region was obligated to uphold its own zoning bylaw and that passing the motion would condone the breaking of the bylaw.

Also opposed was Owen Kennedy, director for Cedar, and Scotty Sutherland of Extension.



Billy the Kid comes to Nanaimo stage

Kristen Eaton receives great deal of attention from Michael Bianchin, who plays part of Billy, Victor Bohlman and David Wallace during rehearsal of scene from The Collected Works of Billy the Kid, by University of Victoria's Phoenix Theatre Company. Play will be staged in Malaspina College Theatre, Nanaimo, as the first major event in the Malaspina Summer Arts Festival Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. with a matinee set for Sunday at 2 p.m.

Board reaffirms herbicide stand

NANAIMO — Private citizens are using far more 2,4-D than the province's largest forest company plans to use in the Nanaimo Regional District this year.

That statement was made Tuesday night to the Nanaimo regional board by a MacMillan Bloedel forester, one of three who appeared before the board to explain the company's planned herbicide program.

The company's regional forester, George von Westarp, said that MacMillan Bloedel's use of 17.5 gallons of 2,4-D in its Northwest Bay Division was minor compared to the 500 to 600 gallons of the herbicide he estimates was sold in Nanaimo last year.

Although several directors said they were impressed by the company's presentation, the board voted to reaffirm its stand against the use of herbicides in the region.

Westarp said that the company plans to use herbicides only where mechanical methods of alder and maple control are not economically feasible or would not work.

Northwest Bay divisional forestry supervisor Doug Best told the board that the sites MacMillan Bloedel planned to treat were at least three miles, and in most cases 10 miles, from farmland or residential areas.

Westarp said that the company is not obligated to apply for herbicide permits on the land it owns but does so to ensure that its application methods are safe.

The company plans to use six pounds of Picloram for alder seed control; 26 pounds of 2,4-D amine for alder release and 50 pounds of Silvex for maple release.

Best demonstrated the hack and squirt method of applying the herbicides, on trees the foresters had brought into the board room for the demonstration.

The trees are chopped with a hatchet and the herbicide sprayed in the gashes.

The herbicides are used to remove alder and maple to give the planted conifer species growing room, Westarp said, and an application of herbicide is done only once to a specific area.

MacMillan Bloedel's director of forestry research, David Handly, answered the board's questions about scientific studies done on the possible side effects of 2,4-D.

The board had written to B.C. Hydro, CP Rail and B.C. Forest Products asking those companies to use manual methods rather than herbicides and decided to uphold its policy in the case of MacMillan Bloedel.

One of the terms of the herbicide permits is that the regional district be informed, but a permit can be halted only after a formal appeal.

Nelson Allen, Nanaimo director, said that MacMillan Bloedel is one of the province's more responsible corporate citizens but that he was not prepared to change the board's policy on 2,4-D on the basis of one demonstration of hack and squirt.

But, Nanoose director Olaf Saele said, he had a different feeling about MacMillan Bloedel than he did about B.C. Hydro or CP Rail, because the forest company was trying to protect its growing conifer trees and was using an insignificant amount of herbicide.

Nanaimo director Ray Brookbank said the region cannot treat MacMillan Bloedel one way and B.C. Hydro another.

New up-Island firm hires handicapped

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Campbell River firm that recently opened its doors for business is giving preference to handicapped people in its hiring program.

Discovery Cleaners Ltd. owner Rolf Haufler believes that handicapped people can do just as good a job as the non-handicapped, provided they are given a chance. Of the firm's seven employees, four are physically handicapped.

As an example, one man who was hurt in a logging accident three years ago and had been unable to find work, was given a job with the firm.

Haufler himself hurt his arm in an accident three years ago and knows what it is like to want work but to be denied it because of a handicap.

The new firm cleans anything from carpets to vehicles to boats, and even outside walls covered with graffiti.

Duncan's SPCA re-established

DUNCAN--Oldest B.C. branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been re-established in Duncan. Immediate goal of the branch is to open the shelter, raise funds fot its operation, and apply for a contract for dog control.

Howard Schesser, president of the local branch, accepted the warrant establishing the branch from regional district chairman Charles Boas and Bill Lynch, B.C. executive director.

And the executive committee received the funds and records of the Cowichan and district branch, together with the keys to the SPCA shelter on Cassino Road.

An application will be made to the Agriculture Ministry for the dog control contract, particularly in the electoral areas south of Duncan. Considerable interest has been shown in the establishment of dog control in Cobble Hill, Cowichan Bay, Mill Bay and the Shawnigan Lake areas.

Closure of the shelter came about due to staff, untion and management problems.

Membership in the SPCA is $5 per year, and information can be obtained by calling Schesser at 748-1723, or Linda Berry at 748-8398.

B.C. schooner damaged

Bawlf will request grounding details

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf said Wednesday he is attempting to contact authorities in Panama through the external affairs department to obtain details on the grounding of the 100-foot schooner Freelance.

The gaff-rigged schooner was to be the government's legacy to the province in commemoration of the Captain Cook bicentennial.

Officials said earlier the schooner had run aground in the San Blas Islands east of the Panama Canal. Extent of the damage was not known.

Bawlf said the ship, purchased for $125,000 last week, was not technically the property of the province yet, and wouldn't become so until it reached B.C.

He said the Quest Star Society of Victoria, which was going to operate the vessel as a youth training ship, is the legal owner. The Freelance is fully insured, the minister said.

Dr. Phillip Ney of the society and Victoria marine surveyor Richard Meadows left here Wednesday for Panama to assess the damage.

Built in Scotland in 1907, the 81-ton Freelance was scheduled to arrive here in early July from Antigua in the West Indies.

On board as crew were Capt. Creston Ketcham of Nanaimo, who holds an unlimited home trade master's certificate, Ralph Higgins of Vitoria, a yachtsman with trans-Pacific experience, Robert Herschfield, a mechanical engineer who helped bring the Quest Star Society's Robertson II through the Panama four years ago, Gerald Main of Vitoria as business manager, Graeme and Verna Isbister and Michael Ker of Victoria as crew.

Ottawa, Victoria should speak out over Duke Point

NANAIMO — The city will ask the federal and provincial governments to do a little plain speaking on the Duke Point environmental topic.

City council agreed Monday night to endorse a request by Cedar area regional director Owen Kennedy that the two governments be asked to translate some of the scientific reports on the proposed port-industrial development into language the layman can understand.

Kennedy told city council that while many people were concerned that there was a lack of scientific study on the effect of the multi-million dollar development, that material did exist — but in a form incomprehensible to most people.

The council agreed with Kennedy's suggestion that the two governments be asked to produce material about the Duke Point studies in layman's language.

Ald. Alex Virostko said that he believed such a report would say much the same as a letter he had received from Environment Canada in February.

In that letter, the federal department said that it did not oppose the development of Duke and Jack points but that there should be no additional log booming licences issued and that booming in the estuary should be gradually reduced.

City council next week will consider a proposed timetable for agreements between the city and B.C. Development Corporation regarding servicing and zoning of the Duke Point site.

The greenbelt and road alignment for the project have already been approved, with council giving its formal approval to the restrictive covenant for the greenbelt Monday night.

Next to be agreed on is the servicing for water and sewer, followed by approval of the method of financing for the servicing.

The timetable outlines steps to be taken by council to provide the rezoning for the land while guaranteeing that the project goes ahead.

Board dated by metrics

NANAIMO — Regional directors had switched time frames and they hardly knew it.

"What does this new numbering system mean?" inquired director from Coombs-Hilliers-Errington Joseph Pullen at the board meeting Tuesday night.

He was referring to the date and time at the top of the board's agenda — "Tuesday 1978 06 18, 19:30."

"When did we change our numbering policy?" he asked.

The region's director of planning Gordon Summers had a ready answer — the region has gone metric.

Malaspina students clean up at Seattle

NANAIMO — Students training to be cooks at Malasina College made a major impact at the Seattle Culinary Arts show over the weekend. The Malaspina team travelled with 50 different entries and came home with an incredible total of 40 gold medals, three silvers and two special mentions. They also won the award for the best student display and for the best student platter.

Debby Cook took two golds and won the prize for the best individual student entry with the other winners Janice Ashmore, 12 golds; Gudrum Buschhaus, three golds; Cathy Horseman, three golds; Brenda Harvey, three golds; Tanja Hespe, two golds and one special mention; Shelly Bryden, one gold; Valerie Elliott, one gold and one silver; Marie Carolan, two golds; Terry Hoyt, two golds and one silver; Susan Snow, two golds; Bob Grant, two golds, and Frank Gordon, one gold.

George Wagner, one of the three instructors who accompanied the college group, collected four golds, a silver and a special mention and had enthusiastic support from fellow instructors Leo Teygeman, the college's director of food services, and Kurt Nillson.

Tenders called

DUNCAN--Tenders have been called by Highways Minister Alex Fraser for construction of two bridges to provide four-lane crossings of the Trans Canada highway. The crossings are over the Cowichan River half a mile south of Duncan, and over the Chemainus 7.5 miles north of Duncan.

Tenders call for the supply, fabrication, delivery and erection of 672 tons of structural steel for two 250-foot single span bridges. The contract also calls for demolition of one sidewalk with railing on the Cowichan bridge, and the re-erection of sidewalk steelwork with railing on the Chemainus structure.

Abutments on steel H-piles on the Cowichan bridge have been completed by Dura Construction of Saanichton. This contract was awarded as part of a multiple bridge job in the district in 1977.

Upset neighbors complain to council

Renaissance Fair in jeopardy

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Hornets Rugby Club's Renaissance Fair may not be reborn next year — unless the organizers can convince city council and some upset neighbors that the crowd at the fair will be better behaved.

A delegation of residents in the area of Pioneer Park, where the fair was held, appeared before city council Monday night to enumerate their complaints against the event.

The fair was noisy far into the night, the residents complained, and there was nudity, drug use and running dogs.

But a representative of the Hornets said that the club denied all of the allegations except the noise created by the fair.

The Hornets had said earlier that the three-day fair was not a financial success for them.

The event was held at a park owned by the city which is partly leased by the Hornets for developing a clubhouse and playing fields.

The residents of the Pioneer Park area presented a petition to council which they said was signed by 90 per cent of the area residents, objecting to the fair and asking that the Hornets' lease at the park be cancelled.

The residents blamed both the Hornets and the city council for what they said had been a giant three-day harassment of the neighborhood.

Council should have instituted a 10 p.m. curfew and not allowed overnight camping, as well as enforced its anti-noise and dog control bylaws, the delegation said.

Lorne Purchase, of Dover Point, said the neighborhood had been unhappy with the idea of the original lease to the Hornets, and believed that now the Hornets had violated the terms of their lease and should have it cancelled.

The Hornets spokesman pointed out that the lease did not give the Hornets exclusive use of the park, and that the club was committed to making expensive improvments at the park. The fair was simply an effort to raise money for some of those improvements, he said.

He said the club apologized to the neighborhood for the discomfort and promised that there would not be a recurrence of the problems if the fair was held in the future.

But the residents' delegation was adamant in opposing the idea of another fair.

"They'll turn around and give it again and then apologize again," Purchase said.

The council approved a motion by Ald. Ada Howden that any request for a similar event come before city council for a decision.

City pitcher agrees to terms with Mussels

By TOM KEYSER

Among the still nameless faces from Ohio and California cavorting at Royal Athletic Park these days a local light shines.

Victoria Mussels, preparing for their opener in the Class-A Northwest League June 20, have agreed to sign Roy Moretti, pitcher for Greaves Movers of the Victoria Senior Amateur League.

Moretti, 21, is a righthander born and raised in Victoria. He'll likely fit into the Mussels' plans as a long reliever.

And, according to manager Jim Chapman, the signing isn't a ploy to lure fans into the park. He says Moretti has a real chance.

"He looks good," says Chapman, himself a Victoria native. "He has a few problems with his delivery but it's just because he hasn't had the right coaching. With a few tips, I think he'll help us."

Moretti hadn't signed late Wednesday but will in the next few days. Chapman says "it's official". Moretti can bid farewell to Greaves Movers.

"I'm really looking forward to playing with the Mussels," Moretti said Wednesday. "I've always wanted a chance to play pro ball but you don't get those kind of chances very often in this part of the country

"I did try out for Cincinnati and Montreal when they had local camps here. They seemed interested but nothing came of it."

"Now all I'm worried about is getting a leave of absence from my job with the city."

The 5-foot-10, 163-pound pitcher includes a fastball, curve and change-up in his repertoire. He was the only local player invited to try out for the team.

Chapman says he's "pretty well down to where we want to be," as far as personnel is concerned.

About 24 players remain in camp and the Musesels figure to open the season with 21. Workouts continue twice daily until the lidlifter.

SHORT HOPS — The Mussels and Labatt's are discussing an arrangement for promotion and financial assistance between the brewery and the baseball club.

A spokesman for the brewery said talks are continuing but that nothing concrete has been agreed upon...Chapman and pitching-coach Don Rogelstad have decided on an early-season pitching rotation. Rogelstad will start the opener in Bellingham and lefthander Dave Cheadle, the staff's most experienced pitcher, opens before hometown fans when the Mariners visit the next day. Frank Lucarelli is pencilled in for the third game here June 22 and Bob Watkins, 21, pitches the next night in Bellingham.

Watkins, from San Diego and released from the Montreal Expos system this spring, is a recent arrival who pitched in the New York-Pennsylvania League (Class-A) last season...Another newcomer is Chad Corcoran, outfielder who stole 26 bases while hitting .274 for Portland in the Northwest League last year...Moretti's father, Ray, played for the old Victoria Tyees of the Western International League, back in the 1950's.

Barons, Stars amalgamate

MONTREAL (CP) —John Ziegler, president of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday that Cleveland Barons and Minnesota North Stars have merged and will operate as Minnesota North Stars next season.

Ziegler said that the new North Stars would play in the Adams Division replacing Cleveland.

The new North Stars will be able to protect 10 players and two goaltenders from the combined present rosters of the two teams.

Washington Capitals and St. Louis Blues will be able to draft one player apiece in the special draft today and then the North Stars will be able to increase their protective list by one player.

Vancouver Canucks and Pittsburgh Penguins will each be able to draft one player after that and once that is completed the new Minnesota team will be able to protect one additional player.

Colorado Rockies will then be able to draft a player and once that is completed the remaining players will be the responsibility of the new club.

"The new North Stars will get $30,000 from each club drafting," Ziegler said.

Cleveland's draft choices in the amateur draft today will be cancelled except for their second-round pick which was already traded to Washington.

Gordon Ritz, president of the North Stars, said the deal is like a marriage—"both have to agree to get together."

Gordon Gund, speaking on behalf of the Barons and his brother George Gund III, chairman of the board, said he and his brother had made the initial approach in the unusual transaction.

When asked why Minnesota was chosen, he said the area is a good region where a strong combination should go over well.

Zeigler denied there was any precedent being set by the merger teams.

Management from the Barons and the North Stars will continue to consult with each other for the time being in operating the new North Stars.

A decision on who will coach the team hasn't been made. Jack Evans coached the Barons last season while the North Stars had been looking for a coach when the deal was arranged.

Asked why Washington, St. Louis, Vancouver and Pittsburth are being allowed to draft in today's dispersal session, Zeigler said prime consideration was given to teams which didn't make the playoffs last season.

No consideration is being given to the addition of another team this year, he added, meaning the NHL will operate with 17 clubs.

Lou Nanne, who finished the season as coach and general manager of the North Stars, said his position hasn't changed as far he knows.

When asked who would direct the North Stars activities in today's amateur draft, George Gund replied that would be settled between Nanne and Harry Howell, the general manager of the Barons.

Gund said he regretted there won't be an NHL team in Cleveland next season, but that a recent market survey showed it was unfeasible to continue operating in the Ohio city.

The Barons lost almost $3 million during the 1977-78 season after suffering heavy losses the previous off-season in moving to Cleveland from Oakland, Calif., where they had played as Oakland Seals since the NHL's first expansion in 1967.

The Gund group bought the Barons from Mel Swig, a San Francisco hotel owner, last summer amid speculation the club was about to fold. In fact, there have been reports almost every season since the Seals joined the league that the team would either move or fold.

Flyers deal with Penguins

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers traded three players to Pittsburgh Penguins late Wednesday night in exchange for Pittsburgh's first choice in today's National Hockey League amateur draft.

Sent to Pittsburgh were defenceman Tom Bladon along with forwards Ross Lonsberry and Orest Kindrachuk.

In addition to the first round draft pick, the Flyers will receive future considerations.

Bladon appeared in 79 games with the Flyers this year, scoring 11 goals with 24 assists for 35 points.

Lonsberry had 18 goals and 30 assists in 78 games, while Kindrachuk, a strong defensive forward, had 17 goals and 45 assists in 73.

Earlier in the evening, goaltender Paul Harrison was traded to Toronto Maple Leafs by Minnesota North Stars in exchange for a fourth-round draft pick and future considerations.

Harrison appeared in 27 games with North Stars last season, allowing 99 goals for a 3.82 goals-against average.

Next game: Tonight — Nanaimo at New Westminster.

By REG REYNOLDS

Victoria Shamrocks were only in command for half the game Wednesday night but that proved to be more than enough time.

The Western Lacrosse Association leaders made up for a slow start by pumping in nine straight goals on the way to pounding New Westminster Salmonbellies 19-11 before a crowd of about 1,000 at Memorial Arena.

The goaltending of Ted Gernaey and the erratic shooting of the Shamrocks enabled New Westminster to pull to a 9-7 lead by the 13 minute mark of the second period.

But, helped by a pair of power-play opportunities, the slow starting Shamrocks finally shifted into their running game and scored the final four goals of the second period. They maintained their momentum through the intermission and scored the first five goals of the third period to make it 16-9 by the 11:36 mark.

Three of the goals were power-play scores by Ron MacNeil, Charn Dhillon and Danny Green and one was a short-handed shot by Art Webster.

Ironically the only goals the Salmonbellies scored in the final period came with big New Westminster rookie Mario Govorchin in the penalty box serving a five-minute major for severly cross-checking MacNeil, the league-leading scorer.

Danny Green was the best of the Shamrocks with three goals and three assists, Gord Lyons, who scored goals nine seconds apart in the first period, had three goals, Norm Baker and MacNeil scored three times each and Ranjit Dillon, Charn Dhillon, Jerry Kustaski, Chris Hall Art Wesbster and Jeevan Dillon scored once each. Hall and Dhillon also had four assists each.

Wayne Goss scored three times and assisted four times for New Westminster and Bruce Turris and Brian Tasker scored twice each. Bob Tasker, Norm Leuszler, Ken Brown and Bill Mosdell scored once each.

Gerneay made 34 saves but after giving up eight of the goals in the Shamrocks streak he was pulled in favor of Jim Greenwell who stopped seven shots and was beaten twice.

Scott Marshall went all the way for Victoria and made 38 saves.

New Westminster plays host to Nanaimo Timbermen tonight and the winner travels with Victoria to the Commonwealth Games Aug. 9-10 at Edmonton.

Fox sparkles

Ken Fox gave up two hits pitching Wednesday night but got them back at the plate, leading Victoria Athletics to a 6-0 victory over Elks in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball at Central Park.

Striking out 13 while walking only one batter, Fox doubled, singled and walked to score three runs. He also drove in a run.

Don Sutton knocked in two for the winners with a single in the sixth inning.

Meanwhile, at Heywood Avenue Park, another batch of Victoria Athletics had equal success.

Dan Wickens, Dave Scott and Mike McPherson each homered in the third inning and Larry McKinnon tossed a seven-hitter as Victoria dumped Webb and Trace 6-2.

Dave Falconer homered for the losers.

In senior women's action at Hyacinth Park, MacDonald's Furniture pounded Hygrade Radio 12-5 while Vicettes slipped by Butler Bros. 6-5.

Marg Barber slammed four hits for MacDonalds and Kathy Bemister had three. Diana Fuhrer doubled and singled for Hygrade.

A sacrifice fly by Heather Knight in the seventh inning gave Vicettes their win over Butler Bros.

Oriole streak now 13

Jim Palmer allowed only the second earned run in his last 59 1-3 innings while pitching a 5-2 victory over California Angels to extend Baltimore Orioles' winning streak to 13 in a row.

A misplayed ball in the seventh inning by centre fielder Carlos Lopez, who drove in two Baltimore runs, ruined Palmer's bid for his sixth shutout of the American League baseball season and the 51st of his career.

With two out, Lopez hesitated before charging a soft liner by Lyman Bostock and then failed to make a shoestring catch. One run scored on the hit and another on the ensuing error by Lopez.

A bases-loaded single by Lopez capped a three-run rally by the Orioles in the third. They scored two more in the fourth, one on a homer by Billy Smith to chase Ken Brett.

In other American League action, Luis Tiant posted his 45th career shutout with a four-hitter as Boston Red Sox breezed to a 9-0 victory over Oakland A's.

Paul Blair's three-run homer with two out in the 10th inning capped a four-run rally and gave New York Yankees a wild 11-9 come-from-behind victory over Seattle Mariners.

In the National League, Vida Blue allowed five hits over 8 1-3 innings and reliever Randy Moffitt struck out Philadelphia sluggers Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski to end the game, giving San Francisco Giants a 2-1 victory over the Phillies.

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer and reliever Ed Whitson picked up his first victory of the season as Pittsburgh Pirates rallied from a four-run deficit to clip Houston Astros 6-4. Jeff Burroughs and Dale Murphy belted home runs as Atlanta Braves whipped St. Louis Cardinals 7-1.

Black Gold tops 'Caps

EDMONTON (CP) — Striker Ted MacDougall lobbed a 20-yard shot over Vancouver Whitecaps' goalie Steve Humphreys at 65 minutes Wednesday night to give Edmonton Black Gold a 3-2 exhibition soccer victory.

The injury-riddled Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League got a goal from Buzz Parsons in the 38th minute on a header off of Bobby Lenarduzzi's free kick.

They tied it 2-2 in the second as Black Gold tender Melija Aleksic bobbed Dale Mitchell's cross and Drew Ferguson jumped on the loose ball for an easy goal.

Gregg quits

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Forrest Gregg has resigned as offensive line coach of San Diego Chargers after 3½ months on the job, the National Football League team announced Wednesday.

Bombers top 'Riders

Winnipeg Blue Bombers won a battle of quarterbacks Wednesday night and rolled to a 23-14 Canadian Football League exhibition victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders before a preseason record crowd of 22,527 in Winnipeg.

Both teams took long looks at their backup quarterbacks, and the Bombers came out ahead with Harry Knight and University of Manitoba graduate Bud Harden throwing touchdown strikes to complement one in the fourth quarter by veteran Ralph Brock.

Saskatchewan also made use of newcomers Ken Washington and Larry Dick to back up Ron Lancaster. Their efforts were less spectacular, although Washington completed a 62-yard drive with a four-yard touchdown plunge early in the fourth quarter.

Archie Gray, Mark McDonald and Mike Holmes scored Winnipeg touchdowns and Harold Woods scored the other Saskatchewan touchdown on a 100-yard kickoff return.

In the East, Ottawa Rough Riders rallied for a 24-16 win over Hamilton Tiger-Cats before 21,414 fans in Hamilton.

Tiger-Cat running back Jimmy Edwards was helped from the field with an injured ankle in the first half and didn't see further action.

South African dilemma

Race law splits couple

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Erhard Klose, a German-born white South African, said Wednesday he still loved his mulatto girlfriend with whom he has lived for eight years although a judge ordered them to separate or go to jail.

A South African judge found Klose guilty of "conspiring to commit sexual intercourse" with his non-white lover of eight years, and ordered them to separate.

The judge sentenced both to six months in jail but suspended it for three years provided they do not violate the law again. They were convicted of violating the Immorality Act which makes sexual intercourse across racial lines a crime.

"I don't know what I am going to do," Klose said Wednesday. "It really hasn't sunk in yet."

He said they had wanted to marry but decided to live together because they thought it would reduce the risk of being arrested.

"All hope of a meaningful relationship has been destroyed," he said. "With the threat of a suspended sentence over one's head what can one do?"

Klose said he met his girlfriend in 1970 when she was working as a shop assistant and immediately fell in love with her.

He said he planned to take her out of the country where they could live in peace but it would take several years before he could save the money to go.

"I still love her now," he said. "It's a cruel law that can part two people who love each other."

The Theron Committee, an official government appointed board of inquiry into ways of improving white-colored relations, suggested in 1976 the scrapping of laws barring sex and marriage across color lines.

The government accepted many of the committee's findings but not those affecting sexual relationships between racial groups. In rejecting the findings, the government said children of mixed marriages were generally not accepted into the society of either parent.

During 1976, 351 persons were prosecuted for violating these laws, an increase over the 325 prosecutions brought in 1975. In 1976, 260 suspects were found guilty compared with 199 the year before. Figures for 1977 are not available.

God upfront for Trudeau

Prime Minister Trudeau set politics aside Wednesday and spent 40 minutes in Ottawa discussing God and the international state of religion with evangelist Billy Graham. Did you talk about God, a reporter asked as Graham left a morning meeting in Trudeau's office that lasted twice as long as scheduled. "That was the only topic of conversation," replied the 60-year-old American preacher.

King Juan Carlos and his wife Queen Sofia left Madrid on Wednesday for China in a new effort to widen Spain's post-Franco image abroad. The 10-day trip includes stops in Iran and Iraq and is the first by a Spanish head of state to China. The royal couple are due to arrive in Peking Friday.

Milton Eisenhower, brother of the late president Dwight D. Eisenhower, thinks U.S. presidents should be limited to a single six-year term, and that the terms of congressmen should also be restricted. Eisenhower, president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University, made his remarks at the annual meeting in Baltimore of American University Presses.

White House sources say President Carter is using a tape recorder to improve his speechmaking style. The sources say the president began to worry about his delivery about six months ago. Now he records practice recitals of speech texts, both for timing and delivery.

For the first time in its 102-year history, McCall's magazine has decided to feature a man alone on its cover. The choice: John Travolta, star of Saturday Night Fever, and Grease. The cover shot on the women's magazine will coincide with an interview with Helen and Sam Travolta, the superstar's parents.

The showing of actress Vanessa Redgrave's controversial documentary, The Palestinian, at the Motion Picture Academy's theatre in Los Angeles was cancelled, Academy president Howard Koch announced Wednesday. Koch said the Friday showing of the pro-Palestinian film, which some Jewish groups have called anti-Israeli, was cancelled because tickets were being sold without the necessary commercial licence.

New Jersey Teamster leader Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano and Harold (Boom Boom) Konigsberg were found guilty of murder in Kingston, N.Y., in the 1961 killing of union rival Anthony (Three Fingers) Castellito. The jurors apparently chose to believe the informant-witnesses, including one who said he helped strangle Castellito, even though the victim's body had never been found.

H. R. Haldeman, whose reported loyalty to Richard Nixon shattered in the backlash of Watergate, will be paroled from Lompoc, Calif., prison on Dec. 20 after serving 18 months of a four-year sentence for obstruction of justice and perjury.

Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali left Moscow on Wednesday for Tashkent, in the heart of Soviet Central Asia, to continue his 12-day tour of the Soviet Union. When they come back to Moscow on Sunday, Ali is scheduled to fight two exhibition bouts with Russian boxers, and sellout crowds are expected.

First-in tallship spruces up after Pacific 'rampage'

Two giant Japanese sail training ships became first of a number of tallships to visit Victoria when they pulled into Royal Roads Wednesday morning after a 38-day voyage from Tokyo. Captains Nakazawa Hiroshi of Nippon Maru and Ichihara Yoshizo, of Kaiwo Maru, said in joint statement on arrival that sister ships suffered "sea rampage" for most of voyage to Victoria. Here, Nippon crew members, spruce up vessel before it pulls into Ogden Point dock for public viewing Saturday and Sunday. (See Page 2)

Won't make farmers scapegoats—Chretien

Food soars but Liberals standing pat

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the government sympathizes with consumers for having to cope with the largest food price increases in six years but there are no policy changes aimed at meeting the problem.

Trudeau and Finance Minister Jean Chretien, facing a barrage of opposition complaints in the Commons, said farmers will not be made the scapegoat for inflation.

The opposition attack came after Statistics Canada released figures showing that food prices rose by 3.3 per cent in May, the highest increases since July, 1972, while the cost of living overall jumped by 1.4 per cent, the largest rise since July, 1975. The 12-month inflation rate last month was nine per cent.

Higher prices for beef, up 10.5 per cent in a month, and for fresh vegetables, up 22.2 per cent, led the way.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, pressing for policy changes to deal with inflation, noted that the nine-per-cent rate was more than double original anti-inflation targets of four per cent for 1978, and above the revised estimate in the April 10 budget of seven per cent.

It was clear government policy was failing, Clark added.

Chretien said he is "disappointed" with the results. He attributed the increase in the price of beef to normal sup-

'Heartless solution' for buyers

REGINA (CP) — Suggesting that consumers suffer higher beef prices while producers recoup their losses of recent years is "a heartless solution to the problem," the Consumers Association of Canada said Wednesday.

Barbra Sulzenko, director of public issues, said association committees met to discuss the issue after it was raised at the annual meeting Tuesday.

Guest speaker Dr. C. M. Williams of the University of Saskatchewan urged the association not to take a stand against higher beef prices.

Sulzenko said the association considers it "unacceptable that consumers should have to pay for producer losses."

Instead, there should be direct assistance from government and government policies to alleviate the problem, she said. The group also suggested a government-producer fund to stabilize incomes for beef producers.

She said the group also is concerned that high-protein vegetables which might be used as beef substitutes are too expensive for low-income consumers.

"We do not have any concrete solutions to the problem, but action must be taken to improve the current supply and demand imbalance, especially since it has become clear that processors and retailers have been cashing in on the producer increases by raising their own margins," Sulzenko said.

"Since import controls were put in place to help producers when prices were low, perhaps export controls should be considered as a short-term measure to help consumers."

'ZOMBIES' ADMITTED BY LEGION

EDMONTON (CP) — Delegates to the Royal Canadian Legion's national convention voted by a narrow margin Wednesday to allow certain conscripted war veterans into the organization.

Voting on a what has been a contentious issue for years, the Legion decided to allow membership to men known disparagingly as zombies—conscripted veterans who served only in Canada.

Conscripts who had served overseas already were eligible.

One official guessed the resolution might affect about 100,000 veterans, but Colin Graham of Montreal, a Legion administrator, said it is unlikely many of the conscripts will seek membership.

About 3,500 delegates are attending the convention which ends today.

Millions pledged to Zaire

BRUSSELS (AP) — Delegates of Western nations pledged $116 million in emergency aid Wednesday for economically crippled Zaire. Diplomats said the supplies could begin flowing almost immediately after the pledges are approved by the participating governments.

In Paris, France announced the withdrawal of the last of its troops sent into Zaire last month to help defeat an invasion by rebel tribesmen in Shaba province and aid in the evacuation of foreigners.

The promises of food and medical assistance were made by technical representatives of most of the 10 countries and the European common market that met Tuesday and Wednesday. They reached agreement in principle on a $1 billion plan to restore the economy and finances of Zaire.

Burnaby sniper hits two women

BURNABY (CP) — Police were searching for two armed teen-aged boys Wednesday night after a sniping incident in which two women were wounded within an hour at the same intersection.

Police said Gwymeth Mary Clandinin, 65, was shot in the upper back while crossing the street to a bus stop at Boundary Road and Hastings.

A short time later, Holly Ann Edwards, 18, was shot in the head while walking though the area. She was in serious but stable condition in hospital, while the older woman was treated and released.

Four bullets were also fired into the rear of a parked car in the area.

40-rider forest bill nettles NDP

Forests Minister Tom Waterland introduced 40 amendments to his new Forests Act Wednesday as the Legislature began second-reading debate.

The move brought instant criticism from Opposition forests critic William King (NDP—Revelstoke-Slocan), who said it was typical of government arrogance to make so many changes and then expect intelligent debate.

"These are amendments which, for all we know, may be good," King said outside the house.

"But for heaven's sake, we should be allowed a couple of days to take a look at them before we are forced into debate. How can we possibly understand the significance of the amendments until we have had a chance to look at them."

Waterland's claim that the amendments were basically of a "housekeeping nature" did not satisfy King.

King said the only praise given the new proposals had come from the Council of Forest Industries "and I would suggest there was a good reason for that." CFI is an organization representing major forest companies.

Waterland ignored the criticism.

"Some self-interest groups have clamored for wholesale redistribution of tenure rights," he said. "Neither the government, nor the (Pearse Commission) recommended this, nor is there any valid reason to do so.

"The objective is to achieve good management through tenure security, not to impede good management through chaotic disruption of employment, communities.

England discovered!

DOVER, England (Reuter) - A crew of Hawaiians paddled their traditional outrigger canoe across the English Channel from France Wednesday to mark the 200th anniversary of the discovery of the Hawaiian islands by British explorer Captain James Cook.

The 40-foot outrigger was to be taken to Cook's birthplace, Middlesbrough, and placed in the new Cook museum.

Follow the rest of us, PM urges Levesque

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has asked Quebec Premier Rene Levesque to join other premiers and "the vast majority of Canadians" in support of the federal government's latest proposals for constitutional reform.

In a letter released Wednesday—parallel letters were sent to the other nine premiers—Trudeau urged the independence-minded Quebec premier to "make an honest assessment" of proposals released Monday that would give the country a new constitution by the end of 1981.

Levesque has already dismissed the suggestions as "profoundly insignificant."

The Trudeau letters ask the premiers to agree to meet within two weeks with federal ministers being dispatched from Ottawa to discuss the proposed changes. Marc Lalonde, minister of federal-provincial relations, has been assigned to meet Levesque.

Trudeau says he is not asking the Quebec government to "participate in a renewal of some sort of status quo."

Instead, the prime minister says he wants the Parti Quebecois government to "join in the revitalization, renewal and revival of the Canadian adventure."

Downed pilot kills self

DAWSON CITY, Yukon (CP) — RCMP say a helicopter pilot who shot himself in the head after his machine ran out of fuel while he was lost in the wilderness probably committed suicide because he felt disgraced.

A police spokesman said Tuesday that Donald Garland, 30, killed himself after his craft crashed Saturday about 32 kilometres southwest of here while on a mineral exploration trip.

Garland and one of his passengers, Robert Gerlock, were uninjured in the crash. A second passenger, Paul Brizins, suffered a minor back injury.

The police spokesman said Garland "apparently felt he could not get another flying job in the north after getting lost and allowing his copter to run out of gas."

Testers tag 2 compacts 'frightening'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group has labelled as unsafe the Dodge Omni and the Plymouth Horizon, two similar Chrysler Corp. models that won Motor Trend magazine's Car of the Year designation.

Consumers Union, a non-profit testing organization, said it is publishing an article in its July issue of Consumer Reports, titled "Most Unfortunate Car of the Year," giving the sub-compact, front-wheel-drive Omni and Horizon its first unacceptable ratings in a decade.

At news conferences in Washington and New York, Consumers Union officials said the cars were found unacceptable because of handling problems.

Don Gshwind, director of chassis engineering for Chrysler, met reporters on the sidewalk coming out of the Washington news conference and said the test used by Consumers Union "has no relationship to the way consumers drive a car."

He acknowledged that Chrysler put the cars through the same test, but it was only one of many. "By itself, it has no meaning."

At the news conferences, Consumers Union showed films of a test in which the car was driven at expressway speed and then deflected suddenly from a straight path.

"The deflection is accomplished by twitching the steering wheel and letting go. From that point, without aid of the driver, most cars straighten themselves with a minimum of wavering from side to side and return close to their previous course," said Mark Silbergeld, director of the organization's Washington office.

Silbergeld said the performance of the Omni and Horizon in the tests "was often frightening." After test drivers released the wheel on each of three samples, "the car veered from side to side. Sometimes each swing was wider and more violent than the one before."

He said the average consumer does not have the driving skill to control the car in such circumstances.

GM RECALLING 600,000 CARS, TRUCKS

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. said Wednesday it is recalling nearly 600,000 cars and trucks — about 23,000 of them in Canada — some with fan blades that could crack and fly off and others with defective rear axles that could result in the loss of a wheel.

A GM spokesman said at least 15 persons have been injured in accidents resulting from the rear-axle flaw.

The fan blade recall involves 333,000 1978 Buick, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars and El Camino and GMC Cabellero trucks equipped with 196-cubic-inch and 231-cubic-inch Buick V-6 engines, 350-cubic-inch Buick V-8 engines and 301-cubic-inch Pontiac V-8 engines.

All systems no without prop and batteries

Environmentalist Derrick Mallard wants to hear from anyone with spare propeller blades, batteries and anything else in good working order that could be put to use in building windmill generators and solar energy collectors.

If you have any cash you wish to donate towards the promotion of alternative renewable energy sources then Mallard and his Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.) want to hear from you even more.

Mallard and his environmental group have received about $15,000 from the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources for a four-month alternative energy technology demonstration project which is to show how solar and wind energy can be used in this area. But the $15,000 just covers the salaries of the six-person project along with basic operating costs. About $9,000 more, either in cash or supplies, is needed to construct the two windmill generators and two solar collectors on which the project hinges.

"If we can't go through with every part of the project then I think the decision would be to cancel it," said Mallard in a Wednesday interview.

At the moment, project employees are working in Mallard's West Saanich road home basement on demonstration models but should start as soon as possible on the working units to complete them by the project's Sept. 15 deadline. One windmill is to have a 2,500-watt capacity and initially will be erected at Mallard's house and monitored there for several months before moving elsewhere for tests. A smaller 500-watt unit will be entirely portable for demonstrations showing how wind energy can charge batteries to supply power directly to households. He described the two solar collection units as about 10 feet high and portable for use throughout the area.

Mallard said he wouldn't have accepted the money (he claims it was unsolicited and based on an earlier rejected project by the federal labor department) from the federal agency had he thought he would not have been able to secure sufficient additional funds elsewhere to finish the job.

The B.C. Energy Commission has over $2 million for an energy conservation program but the best Mallard could do was a possibility of about $1,000 available at an unspecified future date. The provincial environment department, according to him, is not in a position to handle a request for a grant needed this summer. A campaign aimed at businesses and local individuals in the area has produced nothing.

He defends his project's worth on a number of points.

"It is most important that this nation and the world in certain areas move into renewable resource systems," he said.

Victoria's abundant sun and windy conditions make it ideal for either wind or solar collecting energy systems. None of the proposed working units in the project is unique. Mallard describes them as "based on a number of exploratory projects being carried out in a number of locations."

Mallard also looks upon the project as having entreprenurial worth for a future company to make components and instal renewable energy systems.

"If there are sufficient people interested, and we must generate that interest, we would obviously form a company and go after it in a business fashion," said Mallard.

'Enemy' beats battery

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

Col. A.E. Sherwin headed along the waterfront to see if the enemy forces had arrived.

They had. The battle was lost.

"I thought I'd have a look on my way to work Tuesday," Sherwin said Wednesday. "They had already knocked most of it down."

The "it" in this case was the Second World War gun emplacement at the end of the Ogden Point pier. Col. Sherwin and two other retired old soldiers—G. C. D'Arcy and F.D.H. Nelson—had mounted a pretty impressive battle to preserve it as a historic site.

IT WAS THE wrecking crew that laid the old gun battery low Tuesday and Wednesday, but the real enemy in the eyes of those resisting the attack was federal officialdom.

"The only sort of comment I would want to make is that the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada will be meeting this month, and one would think the government would have been prepared to wait until the board reached a decision—particularly since the board is constituted to advise government," Sherwin said.

The final word in the matter had come from the federal transport department. Earlier, Transport Minister Otto Lang had informed Allan McKinnon (PC—Victoria) that the gun battery was being removed as part of the over-all rebuilding of Ogden Point. A new shipping terminal is to replace warehousing destroyed by fire last August.

All that remains of old soldiers' dream

McKINNON, WHOSE AID was enlisted by the three old soldiers, said last month his mail indicated the public wasn't really interested in saving the structure.

Many were oblivious to the history of the old building. They saw it only as an unsightly structure scarred by time and vandals.

But Sherwin, D'Arcy and Nelson said it was of considerable historic value. They said it was one of a kind—the last such emplacement built for defence of Juan de Fuca Strait during the Second World War. They also argued that it was included in places of national historic importance named for preservation in 1958 by the sites and monuments board. But others oppose this view, saying the declaration applied only to Fort Rodd Hill because of its suitability as a park. Fort Rodd Hill, incidentally, came about chiefly through an earlier campaign by the same three men.

THE THREE WENT into their latest battle well prepared. Their argument and their documents managed to stall original plans to destroy the gun battery.

But in recent days, through discussions with Ottawa officials, they became aware that the battle was all but lost.

The final taste of defeat came this week.

Liquor-shift speeded as hotels lose beer

All but three or four Victoria hotels will be out of beer by the end of the week, B.C. Hotel Association officials predicted Wednesday night.

However, with the brewery industry lockout completing its first week, there was one note of optimism: the provincial government appeared to be making good on its promise to try to speed up licensing procedure for beer parlors wanting to switch to pub classification and sell liquor.

Sources said they understood 62 of the quick liquor licences were approved by Tuesday night. At least one Victoria hotel—the Tally-Ho—had its approval by Wednesday and had made the necessary changes to limit seating in the pub to 125.

"We're lucky," an employee said. "We were just about running out of beer."

The move, on a province-wide basis, will at least have a minor effect on the mushrooming layoffs in the hotel industry.

By Wednesday union officials said more than 4,000 hotel employees across the province had been idled or forced onto short work days by the dispute.

Their number has been added to the 1,200 members of the Canadian Brewery Workers Union left without work by lockouts at Labatt's, Molson's and Columbia breweries, and the three-week-old strike by the same union against Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver.

Caught in the lockout are Labatt employees in Victoria and Vancouver, Molson employees in Vancouver, and Columbia workers at Creston.

Talks broke off last Friday and weren't expected to resume for at least a week. At that time a number of brewery union officials left for a union convention in Toronto, where financial support was pledged Wednesday to those involved in the dispute. This is also expected to affect members of the same union idled by lockout and strike action in Manitoba and Alberta. The same breweries are involved in those disputes.

The union has refused to negotiate with a new association representing the various brewery companies. It has insisted on meeting the breweries on an individual basis.

Several hotels in Greater Victoria have already run out of beer. Among the latest casualties Wednesday night was the beer parlor at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

"We're just about out now . . .we'll be closing before the night is through," an employee said.

The smiles of B.C. super $2.5 million

Canadian Press

Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy has replaced her Smile campaign with a Super Smile campaign.

The minister said Wednesday that 100,000 lapel buttons will be distributed with the motto British Columbia has a super smile for you. The campaign will cost $2.5 million, she said.

Mrs. McCarthy said the Smile campaign was so successful last year that it is being imitated elsewhere.

Saanich seeks revenue

Dog licence crackdown

A crackdown against dog owners who fail to buy licences for their pets will be instituted by Saanich if council acts on a recommendation of its finance committee.

The move stems from criticism by Ald. Ian Cass that present licensing enforcement is inadequate.

"The number of dogs licensed bears no relationship to the number of dogs in the community," he complained during discussion Tuesday.

The amount budgeted for dog licence revenue this year ($20,500) anticipates only 3,700 licences being sold, he said.

"This appears to mean only about 10 per cent of our population have dogs and we all know that's nonsense."

Cass said it was obvious the municipality was not selling anything like the number of licences it should.

Increasing the present fee schedule—$5 for a male or spayed female, $15 for an unspayed female—would be hitting those citizens who now buy licences, he suggested.

Controller-treasurer Roy Broughton said that in 1969 the revenue from dog licences and pound fees defrayed 80 per cent of the pound's operating costs, but this year will account for only 48 per cent.

Students have been employed for the past two summers selling licences on a door-to-door basis in Saanich on a 35 per cent commission basis, Broughton said. Ten students will embark on this year's program next week.

Ald. John Mika said summer was not the best time to conduct such a canvass because many people are away.

He suggested a campaign in the fall, that local dog clubs be invited to undertake the task as a money-raising venture, and the standard fee be tripled for for chronic offenders collecting an unlicensed dog from the pound.

The committee voted to refer the entire question of licence fees to the intermunicipal committee and asked staff to investigate Mika's proposals and prepare a report for council.

B.C. probing schooner fate

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf said Wednesday he was attempting to contact authorities in Panama through the external affairs department to obtain more details on the grounding of the 100-foot schooner Freelance.

The gaff-rigged schooner was to be the government's legacy to the province in commemoration of the Captain Cook bicentennial.

Officials said earlier the schooner had run aground in the San Blas Islands east of the Panama Canal. Extent of the damage was not known.

Bawlf said the ship, purchased for $125,000 last week, was not technically the property of the province yet, and wouldn't become so until it reached B.C.

He said the Quest Star Society of Victoria, which was going to operate the vessel as a youth training ship, is the legal owner. The Freelance is fully insured, the minister said.

Dr. Phillip Ney of the society and Victoria marine surveyor Richard Meadows left here Wednesday for Panama to assess the damage.

Built in Scotland in 1907, the 81-ton Freelance was scheduled to arrive here in early July from Antigua in the West Indies.

On board as crew were Capt. Creston Ketcham of Nanaimo, who holds an unlimited home trade master's certificate, Ralph Higgins of Vitoria, a yachtsman with trans-Pacific experience, Robert Herschfield, a mechanical engineer who helped bring the Quest Star Society's Robertson II through the Panama four years ago, Gerald Main of Victoria as business manager, Graeme and Verna Isbister and Michael Ker of Victoria as crew.

Jetfoil runs a full month

Canadian Press

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday Boeing had agreed to extend its trial jetfoil service between here and Seattle this summer to one month from two weeks.

The jetfoil, which begins the service July 22, carries 245 passengers and completes the run in one hour and 40 minutes.

Ministry hunting space

The education ministry is among those interested in using vacant school buildings in the Greater Victoria school district, school board chairman Susan Brice said Wednesday.

As mentioned in a report of the school board's process committee, the committee guiding board deliberations on school closures, Mrs. Brice and school board vice-chairman Peter Dorazio met with the ministry "to discuss both capital programs for the Greater Victoria school district and the utilization of school space and its relationship to the space needs of the ministry," Mrs. Brice confirmed.

The meeting was "not particularly productive," she said, and the discussion was confined to generalities.

"The ministry is itself interested in additional space, possibly to replace space now used in St. Anne's Academy," Mrs. Brice said. "They have indicated to us that they would like to be kept in mind."

Ministry officials also indicated that they would look favorably on requests from the district for capital funds to convert the district's vacant supply centre into administrative offices if the board were to make its present administrative headquarters on Foul Bay Road available to Camosun College.

The college has asked the board for the buildings, which could help the college out of a severe space shortage during a major building program scheduled to begin this winter at the adjacent Lansdowne campus. The college also has long-range plans for the 40,000 square feet in the school board administrative offices, comprised of the Paul Building and the district media centre, and if they are not available, the necessary space will have to built elsewhere on the college campus.

School trustees voted Monday to reverse a recommendation from a special committee examining the future of the buildings. That committee, headed by trustee Mary Breer, said the school board should advertise the space on the open market, rather than give Camosun College first option on the space.

But trustee Dorazio, also a Camosun College council member, said the school board has an obligation to the college, and argued that a slightly better price from a commercial client for lease of the board's administrative centre would not be in the best interests of taxpayers if the college were forced to construct new space to make up for the loss of the Paul Building and media centre.

The Greater Victoria school board could not have obtained the Paul Building if its former owner, the University of Victoria, had viewed it as a purely commercial transaction, Dorazio noted.

The board, including Mrs. Breer, voted to enter into negotiations with Camosun College for use of the Paul Building and media centre.

Strap issue filed, forgotten

A suggestion that use of the strap be considered in schools has simply been received and filed by the Greater Victoria school board, school board chairman Susan Brice said Wednesday.

The suggestion that it would be considered if a board were to request it was made by Education Minister Pat McGeer in a letter to the school board.

The school board had discussed the matter in camera but trustee John Young had released McGeer's letter as a protest against the board's conducting business in closed meetings which Young felt should be public.

Since the meeting was in camera, Mrs. Brice said she could not comment on the discussion that took place at the meeting, other than to say trustees have no interest in asking permission to use the strap.

McGeer confirmed in an interview Tuesday that he would indeed consider use of the strap in schools, but only if support for the idea came from teachers and principals as well as school trustees.

A policy to use corporal punishment would have little success unless those expected to apply it supported it, McGeer said.

Traffic tickets beat record

Judge William Ostler is expected to receive a record stack of 165 traffic tickets in Victoria provincial court today—all for one person who is the president of two holding companies.

The tickets, issued between April, 1977 and April, 1978, belong to the two companies and court staff have calculated that if the minimum fines were levied in each case, the total would be $1,340.

An informed source said that two cars and a motorcycle were involved in the offences and that Victoria police had to tow away one of the vehicles Friday to serve summonses on the person.

The offences include:

- 61 parking meter violations.
- 56 general loading zone violations.
- 14 truck loading zone violations.
- Eight parking on sidewalk violations.
- Six passenger zone violations.
- Six yellow line violations.
- Six no parking zone violations.
- Six parking more than 12 inches from curb violations.
- Two hooded meter violations.
- One left wheels to curb violation.
- One bus zone violation.
- One obstructing driveway violation.
- One occupying two meter spaces violation.
